Facing the Change

"Another turning point, a fork stuck in the road. Time grabs you by the wrist—directs you where to go." Those words of Green Day seemed to make more and more sense as Stafford and its students experienced a year of growth and change. The hourglass of our time had come to a few mere morsels and was ready to be turned over for a new millennium. As we saw our environment being altered, we too sensed a feeling of new beginnings arising. Soon the future would arrive holding unpredictable spontaneity and memories soon to be shared. When we looked around, we saw the transformation not only from students into adults, but moments into memories.

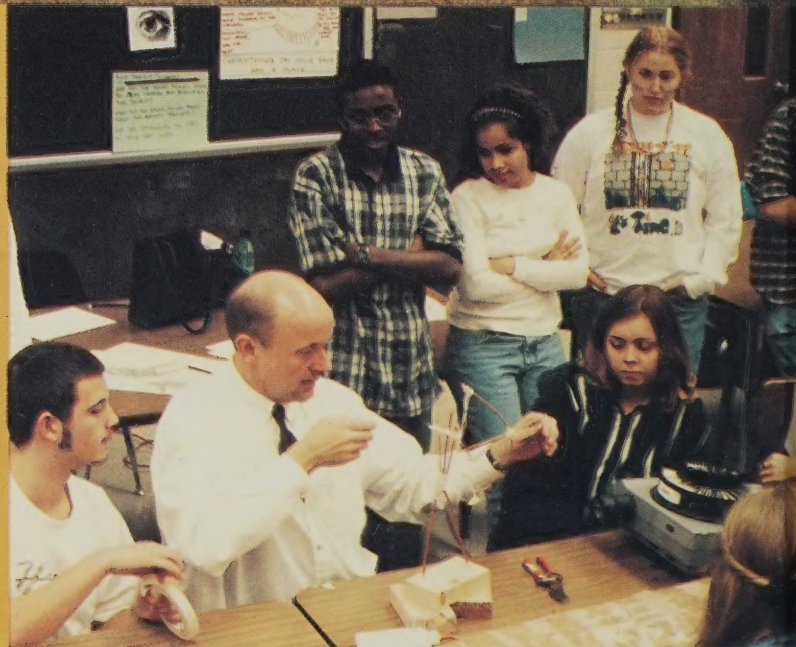

If nothing else, most students agreed that high school is a time of changing and maturing (at least a little bit). Melissa Cartagena expresses, "I've been more sociable and less critical—I've learned how to be friends with all sorts of people. I've become so much stronger as an individual... most of us have." Amy Parsons elaborates, "Now I feel like my true self—I'm not trying to impress anyone or hide the truth about myself. I used to worry about too much petty stuff, and after four years I've realized the worries aren't worth it. Just live."

As the seniors looked back, they saw how much they have changed since being here. Adrienne Brown explained, "If you look at pictures from my freshman year, I look like much less of a goober now. But I have matured a lot and learned a lot about people, relationships, and all that stuff. It was a good time if you ask me." Underclassmen—on the other hand—don't quite understand the transformation and maturity growth they will experience. Cole Copley stated, "I'm looking forward to meeting girls, but other than that, I just hope I pass all my classes and get out of here as early as possible."

Though all the students experienced a year of growing up, many didn't realize it until they look back on themselves in earlier years. The lessons we all have learned and the hardships we have experienced will carry on for years to come, though some take it more seriously than others. "I learned not to wear socks," said Oliver Goldman. Scott Ferrebee also commented, "High School has changed me into a better person." Melissa Rose took a more genuine approach to her feelings as she said, "I've learned who my true friends are and how to deal with difficult situations better. I know I have matured and changed. I like life a lot more since I now have seniority."

As the year came to a close, a feeling of hope and anticipation came upon us all. Looking ahead, the future held only the unexpected. "It's something unpredictable, but in the end it's right. I hope you have the time of your life."—Green Day. Story by Nicole Brors.

Changing Times

The laughter, the smiles, the tears—all of these elements played a part in the student life at Stafford. When looking back over the events of high school, there are certain events that left a lasting impression in our minds. Jenny Witter remembers, "When I tried to flip Katie Rogers over me and she fell on her head. It looked cool when the New Kids did it." Courtney Berry also recalls "Kaden Yealy in the back of Liz Lewis' mom's Jeep singing 'Particle Man' on the way to Denny's at three o'clock a.m."

Downtown Fredericksburg also lent itself to many memories made. Kevin Ouelette will never forget "ghouling people with the invisible ghouling mask." This act involved wearing a cheap mask and making monster noises for the purpose of pure amusement. "I will never forget driving downtown with Adrienne Brown singing 'You've Lost That Lovin' Feeling' out the window." Said Liz Lewis. Adrienne Brown added "Yeah, I'll always remember cruisin' the strip downtown with Liz."

Sometimes students remembered getting in trouble but that didn't stop it from being fun. Darragh Copley stated, "The best was the food fight against the entire carpeted area of the cafeteria." All of the students involved seem to forget about cleaning it up though.

As we grew to experience new aspects in being a teenager, we could look back on the past with a new understanding. All of the memories added up to make our year here at Stafford as fun-filled as every other. As Callie McGlenagan stated, "We will never get these years back. This is it. These are the best years of our childhood. Live it up." Story by Nicole Brors.

Bringing it to a Close

The end of the year brings tears and cheers

As the end of the year came into view, we caught sight of such events as prom, graduation and the arrival of summer days and sleeping in. The end of the year also meant another class will move on and a new class of seniors will rise to the challenge of that faithful last year. The end of the year was a relief to many but it could be tearful at times. "It was sad to see a lot of my friends graduate, it really set in that all those people were gone to be gone," said Lisa Mendoza, now a senior herself.

With the end in sight, juniors and seniors begin to get excited about prom. Brandon Yonts said he was "glad when it was time for prom, the year was almost over!" That feeling was felt by many at Stafford High School. Last prom was the first to be held away from the school and reviews on this were good from the students. "It was pretty cool having prom somewhere else, it was good," commented Ross Duvall. Prom was a success, and the year was ending.

Teachers and students prepared to end the year and let go of the class of 1998. "It's always sad to see a class leave but they're all moving on in life, and that's exciting," Mrs. Pat Wheelbarger said. The time had come to see how successful the class of '98's seniors' education had been. It was time for them to go on with their own lives, jobs, colleges, and freedom from parents. Now the time has come for the class of '99 to take its turn and do it all over again! Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz

Angel Dodson

"This summer was awesome because I was able to be reunited with my older sister. We hadn't seen each other in 14 years so it was cool chilling with her and her friends."

Meaghan Wilson

"When I went to the Dave Matthews concert."

The Summer, a time to be Free

Students spent their summers as they pleased

Summer days are all about freedom, sunshine, fun, and most importantly, NO SCHOOL! Instead of getting out of bed every morning (after hitting snooze a few times), students spent their summer days as they wished. Lindsey Diebold enjoyed her summer "getting to do whatever I wanted, finally being able to drive, and chilling with friends every day." Lindsey was not the only one whose car established her freedom.

Jason Ayers, Nathan Compton, Gabe Compton, and Kyle Rose used their freedom productively. After many summer band practices, these four recorded their own c.d..

While some students remained home for the summer, others traveled to different countries. Holly Pierce got a tattoo while vacationing in Holland. She said, "It hurt just a little." Members of the senior class traveled to Cancun, Mexico. "It was a great experience especially before my senior year," said Darragh Copley.

Whether summers were spent driving one's first car or like Scott Virden, "watching Discovery Channel all night long," students used their summer as free time for relaxation. Scott Ferrebee, Ryan Rall, Travis Price, and Graham Hope escaped their responsibilities at Pratt Park, throwing the frisbee around.

As summer days grew shorter, students knew their freedom was about to be distracted with homework, teachers, and learning. Responsibilities of the school year arose and students carefully prepared for back-to-school. Story by Amber Leigh Carpenter.

What do you think about the changes on the high school?

Katherine Thompson

"Mrs. Woodie is a really good coach, she's brought a lot of team unity and spirit to the varsity hockey team."

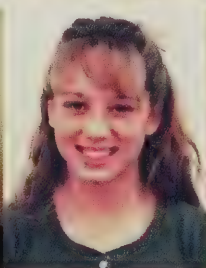

Marques Greene

"I think that all the new teachers are great, they are really for the new students, especially the freshmen."

Shannon Terembs

"The school looks better, but it feels even more crowded!"

Jessica Player

"The school was built in the '70's; it needed to be renovated!"

Josh Chamberlain

"It was a good change of scenery; I mean, the school has been the same since . . . seems like forever"

Jaime Hizer

"I think the big change this year is that the teachers and administrators forgot what it was like to be teenagers and to have fun."

Under Construction

Construction last longer than the summer...

For the duration of the summer, our school was under construction. Students were upset that it wasn't done in time for the new school year but in the end everyone was happy with the school and the new fields.

Outside, a new football field and new practice fields were added or improved upon. Not many people liked this new construction at first, especially since it wasn't completed on time. However, by the middle of September, most were grateful of the many changes. Shaun Austin said, "At first I was kind of upset, but everything looks great now, so I'm happy."

The inside of Stafford was still rough around the edges on the first day, however the lighting and the air-conditioning were completed. Mary McDougal said, "The air-conditioning really works, especially in the Governor's School classrooms." And it's true, many students ate outside to escape the chill inside the cafeteria. Amanda Johnson said, "Yeah, it was pretty bad with the carpeted area closed off and all the people in line for food, you had to eat outside just get a seat and not be smothered!" Well, Amanda, if that's your excuse. A lot of people ate out to see our beautiful campus. Even with the construction, the new fields looked great. Inside, there were no complaints about the new cafeteria ceiling or the great lighting. "The food was brought in from other schools and there were a lot of lines for food, but not a big selection," said Jennie Thomas, "Hey, they tried." The county also tried to put in new and improved lockers, but says Erin Hughes, "Two people's stuff just can't fit into one locker!" She later added, "I'm getting used to it, so it's not that bad anymore." Overall, when the school was completed, everyone was happy.

Practicing in the summer Heat

The beginning of the season or the end of summer?

Towards the end of the summer, if you happened to drive by the high school early in the morning, you would probably see a bunch of kids running, cheering, or playing an instrument outside the school. The athletic teams, cheerleaders, and band all met towards the end of the summer to practice for the school year.

Even though it is a good idea to start early and get a head start on the season, most students didn't like the fact that they had to get up early in the morning for practice. After a long summer of partying and having fun, it was a big change when students had to get in early at night so they were able to get up at six and seven in the morning. As Jimmy Hare on the freshman football team said, "The first couple of days were the hardest, but it got easier."

All the teams practiced hard to get in shape for the year. Ashley Dameron from the girls cross country team said, "We practiced a lot on our own so that when practice started in August we had fun and threw ourselves into our workout." Samantha Wellerman, one of the Varsity cheerleaders said, "Summer practice was hard, but in the long run it paid off." To those of you who made it through the summer heat and the workouts, CONGRATULATIONS!! You made it through the summer practices. Story by Bobbi Decatur.

What did you think of summer practices?

Bobbi Decatur

"Summer practices kind of put a beginning on the year. When we came back to school we were already prepared for the early mornings and tough workouts after school."

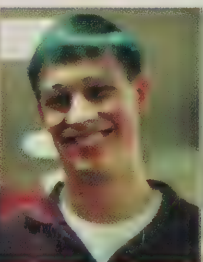

Amber Carpenter

"Summer practices were early, hot and tiresome, but we were able to increase our stunting abilities immensely!"

Megan Hanson

"I felt like summer was over when practice started because they were really early, so I couldn't stay out late."

Brandon Jennings

"We practiced from 8 in the morning to 5 in the evening the last two weeks of summer. Ten hours of practice just for band, go figure?"

Matt Matter

"You don't want to know!"

Jenny Witter

"Yeah, the practices were pretty tough, but overall we had a pretty good season."

Shaun Austin

“Carrying horse poop around and getting poison ivy all over my legs.”

Robbie Orange

“Teaching little kids how to play basketball.”

India Myers

Heidi Keeton

“The customers. I met a lot of really nice, cool people.”

Working Part-Time

Learning from their experiences

Those students with summer jobs learned practical lessons which they could use in their lives. Heather Simpson, who worked for a mortgage company said, "I learned how to pay bills. This will be great when I get older and have a house of my own."

Other students learned just how hard manual labor can be. Jimmy Hare, who worked in paving said, "I laid asphalt on driveways this summer. It was really hot outside, and it was very hard work."

When asked about their summer jobs, many students stressed just how important their job was to them. Robin Good, who worked in childcare said, "Most people say that babysitting isn't a job, but when all your attention has to be focused on one child, and you're completely responsible for them, now that's a job!" Roxanna Richardson, who worked at The Coffee Beanery, also learned a valuable lesson, "I worked a lot of hours and it paid off because I got promoted. I also met lots of really cool people."

Summer jobs can have their strange moments too. Brandon Welsh, who worked at King's Dominion, brushed up against an out-of-the-ordinary experience. "This older dude came up to me and asked for change for a dollar. I didn't think anything of it, until I looked down for a second- and noticed that the guy had no pants or shorts on! I told the guy to go put some pants on, and then maybe I'd give him the change!"

Working overall, was an educational and enjoyable experience for most students. When asked if they'd do it again, most agreed that it was worth their time and effort. Story by Kathy Gardner.

The First Week of school

Trying to find their ways around school

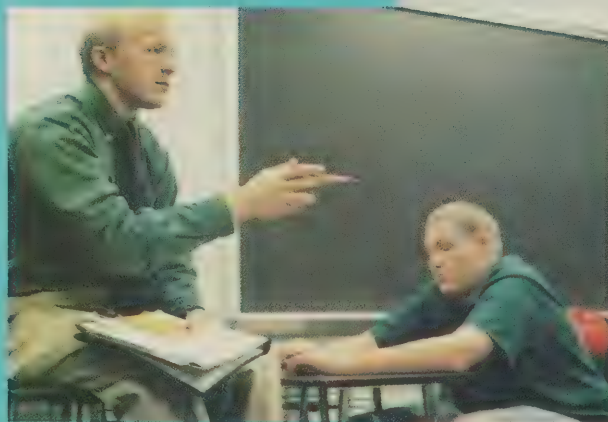

Once again, the Stafford parking lot became full, lockers were being slammed shut, and the halls became impossibly crowded passageways to your next period class. Yes, school had started. As September 8th had become one of the most dreaded days of the year for some people, others, like some of the seniors, had anticipated the first week of school as a week to sell pool and elevator passes to confused freshman and display the seniority in every way possible. To the juniors, the first week of school marked a move up in the ladder from an underclass sophomore to an upperclassman.

In general, the same feeling flowed throughout most of the students of Stafford on their first week. Craig Hamiton summed up the feelings of a majority of the students when he said, "I was used to sleeping in, and now I have to get up—I hate it!"

Other students were more concerned with the confusion of the school inside, with the classrooms and very few lockers. Augusta Kuchinski said, "Finding all of the new classrooms and stuff was really confusing the first week. I kind of didn't know where to go sometimes."

Freshman Ferida Meyer explained, "On the second day of school, I thought my locker was upstairs, so I tried to get it open. Then a bunch of juniors came up and were like 'Freshman lockers are downstairs, go somewhere else'." Though many freshman will go home with horror stories about their first week of school, the majority of the students at Stafford will go home with the same memory best explained by Freshman Maryanne Yednock, "It was really long, and very, very, BORING!" Story by Stephanie Heffernan.

What was your most embarrassing moment at school?

Ricky Dickinson

"My freshman year on the first day of school I couldn't remember where to go for my first period class so I had to get my bus driver to walk me there."

Diana Young

"Once I was walking out of the cafeteria and someone behind me pushed me REALLY hard so that I slammed into the people in front of me."

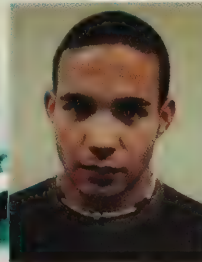

Meaghan Wilson

"When I was in the cafeteria and I flung my hair back and it got caught in the zipper on someone's bookbag. It took me like 5 minutes to get it out."

Bobbi Decatur

"When I was walking around in the parking lot with my skirt tucked up underneath my bookbag so that everyone could see my butt."

Jacob Greene

Ashley Ludlow

"Falling up the stairs and causing a pile-up."

We've Got Spirit

Pep Rallies help to fired up school spirit

The question on whether Stafford was going to have a pep rally or not, kept many students curious and asking. The fact that the pep rallies were limited to very few Fridays, disappointed some of Stafford's students. "I wish that we would of had more of them," said Stephanie Trant, "because I personally like having them." But the view that Stephanie had on pep rallies didn't agree with other students who didn't care for the idea of having school spirit and enthusiasm. "I think that they're really boring to sit through, but I know that I shouldn't complain cause they get us out of classes early," said Brooks Thomas.

The pep rallies this year were an hour, packed with music, dancing, and entertainment. "I enjoyed watching the people come out and do stupid stuff like lip-sync to the whole school," said Danny Labar. Also pep rallies were a chance where the sports teams could get recognition for their accomplishments throughout their season. "I like walking through the gym with my adrenaline running through me," said Steven Love, a Varsity football player.

What do you like most about pep rallies?

Nicole
Zwieneff

"I enjoy just getting out of classes early."

Melissa
Cartagena

"Being a senior, we had a lot more class spirit, and it was neat how the underclassmen had to wait for us to walk in."

Chuck

"Before as underclassmen, us seniors never wanted to stay for them, but this year we've really gotten into them."

Tony Wright

"What I like most is everyone's spirit, everyone just lets themselves go."

Christie

"My favorite part of pep rallies is when students get into it, and do little skits and stuff."

Eric Fennell

"I enjoy the loudness of everyone. We have so much enthusiasm, that you can't even hear the person standing beside you."

Let's get Fired Up

Boosting spirit for the Homecoming game

Since spirit week was the week before Halloween, many students were very willing to dress up in goofy costumes. "I'm going to be a swimmer!" exclaimed an excited Erin Hughes at Thursday's bonfire. By dressing up for the school spirit days, the students supported their football team in its time of need.

On Monday, get up and go day, students could be seen in their pajamas with sleepy grins on their faces. Clash day was when everyone could express their ineptitude in dressing themselves without getting made fun of for it. "Instead of clashing, I decided to make all my clothes match," said a completely blue Derek Salerno. There was a rash of look-a-likes on Wednesday for twin day, there were even some triplets and quadruplets. Laura Baker remarked, "I'm twins with almost the whole sophomore class." Blue and Gold day showed just who had school spirit and who didn't. And much to everyone's enjoyment, Friday was costume day. Even Mr. Wayne Wray, the Latin man, had something to say about that. "I got to wear my Frankenstein doll around my neck!" The pep rally on Friday also proved to boost spirit and low moral. The addition of the Backstreet Boys was a welcome change to the screaming girls, too.

All of these shenanigans were a part of Homecoming tradition. With their spirit boosted, students went to the game and dance proud to be an Indian. Story by Bri Bevan.

The Big Night

Homecoming and the week leading to it

Everyone looks forward to it, preparing for it is exhausting, and the week is all together hectic... that's right, Homecoming. What's all the fuss about it anyway, it's a dance, a game, a king, a queen, and some floats, right? Completely wrong! Homecoming is so much more. The week itself is days of spirit and hours of extra work after school preparing floats for the infamous class float competition. "I was here almost everyday helping with the float," said Roy Perry. Everyone gets ready for the big Homecoming game on Friday, decorating the school and pumping everyone up for the game. "We spent Thursday afternoon decorating the whole school for the Homecoming game," Sam Wellerman, a varsity cheerleader, stated.

Thursday was also the night of the annual Bonfire. It's a great night to come out and spend with friends. "I think it gets everyone excited for the game and just excited for Homecoming in general," said Jenny Garrison. The bonfire included the traditional games, pie-eating, cheering around the fire and just having fun with friends and classmates. It was a great way to get Stafford set for Homecoming.

Though this year was a little bit different, the spirit was present as always. Students dreaded the news that they would not be able to have Homecoming at home and possibly that the floats would be nonexistent too. "I was just hoping Stafford would get to play one game at home this year!" said Sammy Newsome. As the final days rolled around, students rejoiced to find out that finally the Indians would really be at home. Floats this year came in the form of "walking murals" a new twist, but still a successful one.

Monday afternoon, work began, preparing murals in the theme of "childhood television shows" and watching our kindergarten favorites come to life once again. "I loved Smurfs when I was little!" Adrienne Brown exclaimed. The senior class took first place in the competition this year with its version of "The Smurfs". The night went smoothly as Michael Brown and Amy Parsons were crowned King and Queen of Homecoming. The dance was a success as always, and the students of SHS all became kings and queens for the night in suits and formal wear, dancing and smiling as another Homecoming faded away. The week that was so long-awaited came to an end and Monday morning it was just another week at Stafford again. Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz.

Ready for a Big Change

Senior year—a time filled with lots of laughter, lots of tears, but most of all, lots of memories. As Jenny Witter said, “You can’t establish your views on life before you experience enough of it.” After four years, seniors felt like they’ve experienced it all, when in reality, they had just begun. They had reached the top only to realize that they would soon have to start all over. Ari Rothman said, “I have changed a lot in high school, I learned you have to live your life the best you can while you can.” Jessica Moore added, “Well, everyone’s changed and I know who my real friends are, and who I can count on.” Looking back on freshman year, most seniors agreed that they were not the same person who had entered these doors four years earlier. Most of them also agreed that their senior year was their best by far. “I love the unity of our senior class. Between tailgating, cookouts, spirit days, and all of our weekend gatherings, I feel like us seniors are just one big group of friends,” said Courtney Berry. The senior class did their best to take advantage of their upperclassmen privileges, and as Amy Parsons summed up best, “Ninety-nine, the last class of the century, definitely a significant year, and now...I’m peacin’ out.” Story by Nicole Brors.

Fall Fun

Having fun as the air cools down and the school year heats up

The Senior Class of 1999 geared up for their last year of high school. Seniors looked forward to this last year as they planned on having the time of their lives.

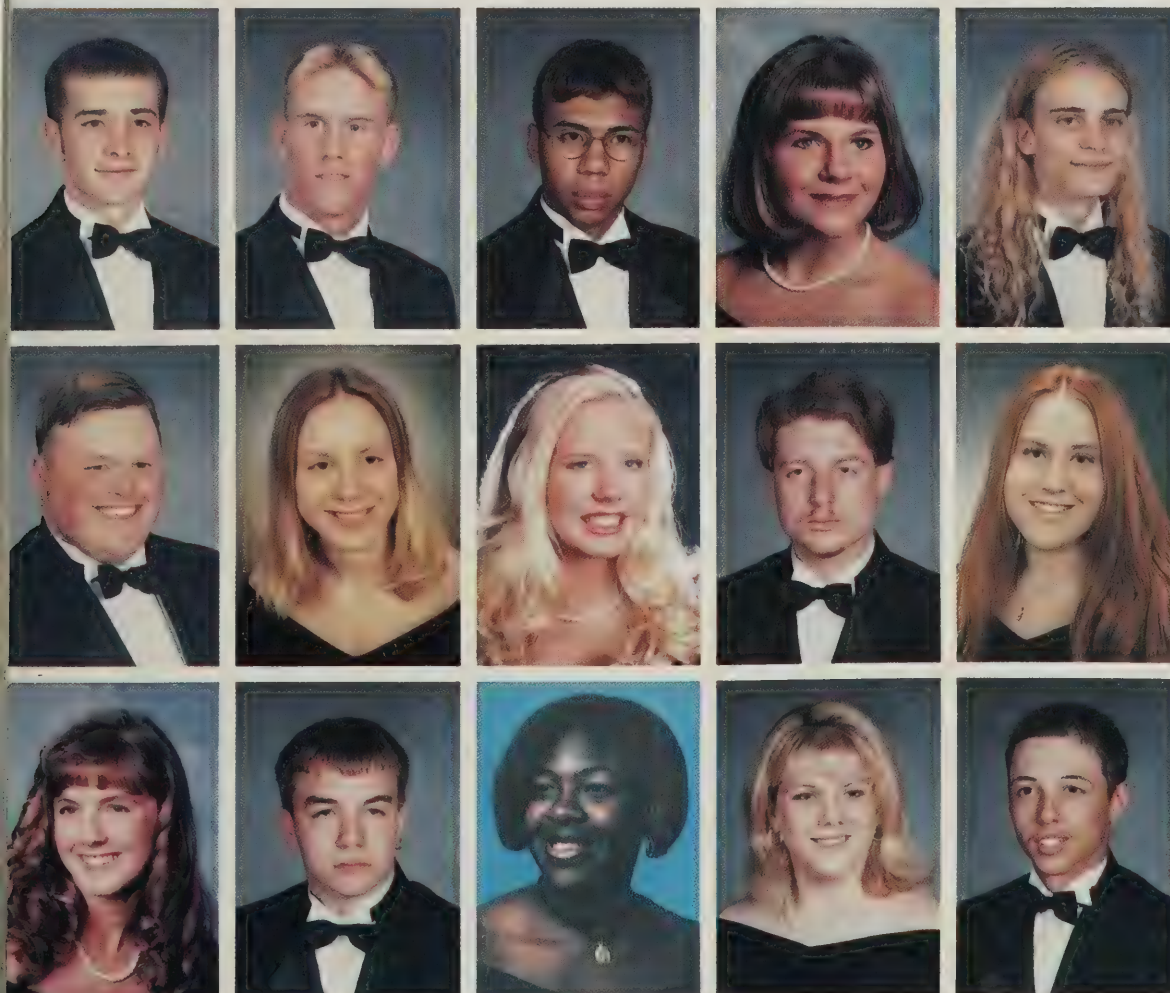

Seniors go to school 5 days a week and on the weekends they simply want to cut loose and as Jessica Moore said, "Just party!!!" "Guys went to Pratt Park and they played ultimate frisbee," commented Amy Parsons. "I got up around 6:00 grabbed my bag and headed to the school for the Saturday Invitational Cross Country meets!" complains Carl Cabanniss, "It was worth it though, Cross Country is so much fun!"

A growing trend this year was "Tail-gating, eatin' food, gettin' all painted up, and then helping the guys get painted up!!" Melissa Rose said. "My favorite part of the whole fall season was when Homecoming rolled around, because then I got to help all of my girl friends find dresses," said Garrett Green. "The bonfire was awesome!" exclaims Lulu Rodriguez. Lisa Mendoza said that, "Going out to eat with all my friends was the best!" There was a huge group of seniors that went to Red Lobster for crabs every Monday night. Soccer and Paintball wars were very popular with the senior boys.

This fall, whether they painted up, played sports, or just hung out, the senior class of 1998-1999 redefined the word "fun" and made many lasting memories of their last fall season in high school. Story by Ashley Dameron.

Field Trips

The Final Reasons to Get Out of School

This year many seniors had the privilege to go on different field trips more so than they had in the past three years. Field trips were a chance for seniors to really enjoy the pleasures of being out of school and learning first hand things that they were studying about during their senior year. Not all seniors go on the field trips, but as Jennifer Myers said, "I wish I would have. They sounded like a lot of fun."

Marine Biology and Geology were two of the classes that went on these field trips. Marine Biology went to Virginia Beach to the Science Museum. Many students enjoyed the chance to tour the museum and it did not hurt that it was in Virginia Beach either. Kevin Oulette said, "Taking the Clothes from the people while they were swimming was the best part." Alden Hingle said, "Just getting out of school for a day is the best part about field trips." Different Geology classes decided to take a field trip to Moorefield in Amelia, Virginia for a day. Students collected different jewels from the mine including pegmatite, amethyst, mica, and beryl crystals. They eventually planned to make jewelry out of the jewels that they collected that day.

Overall, the senior year of field trips was a big success. Not only did they get to enjoy the interesting places they went, but they also got to enjoy simple days of freedom before they venture off to work or college. Story by Bobbi Decatur.

Senior Rules

An exciting time of life for being on top of the world

Gooooooooo Stafford!!!
Students and parents gather at a varsity football games. Seniors could act as wild and crazy as they wanted to support their team. Photo by Meagan Wilson.

It is a time when a person leaves his or her adolescence behind, and begins the passage into adulthood. It is a time when a person asks himself or herself, "What am I going to do with my life?" But let's get serious here. Being a senior really means just plain kicking back, relaxing, and enjoying the fact that you rule the school! A few students shared the best parts about being a senior.

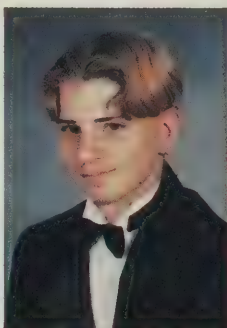

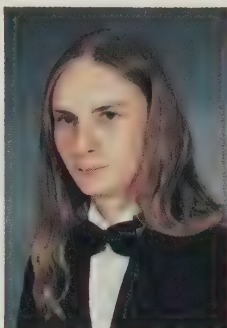

Eduardo Leon said, "The best part about being a senior is that you get to make more decisions for yourself, and do more. Plus, you get an extra day off!" Seniors were given the privilege of choosing the classes they wanted to take, since the majority of their diploma requirements had already been met by that time. Seniors could not be absent for more than five days in order for them to be exempt from their year-end class exams, unlike underclassmen, who had to be absent no more than four days.

Seniors also had an age advantage over the underclassmen. Since the average age of a senior is eighteen, and this is no longer underage by law, most could pretty much hang out after school whenever and wherever they wanted to. Kevin Ouellette said the best part about being a senior was, "... (G)etting together on Fridays and eating pig (at pig roasts). And then there's always crab night on Mondays..." Yolanda McQuinn said, "Just knowing that your pretty much grown up is the best part about being a senior."

The magnificence of being a senior was more of a state of mind than a physical thing. The overwhelming excitement of the last year of high school could make some people feel invincible. Such as Roy Perry who said, "Just being a senior [is the greatest thing]. You can basically get away with anything you do!"

The senior year of high school is an exciting time because thirteen years of schooling is coming to a close, and everyone is moving on. Though it can also be depressing to leave, all seniors will agree that their last year was a bit interesting, if not totally exciting. Ruling the school is a great job, and hey, who else can go totally nuts at a varsity football game and still look so utterly cool? Story by Kathy Gardner.

Working Hard

Challenging themselves in independent studies

Modern Technology David Lawson and James Ripley work (and play) on a laptop computer during their independent study course. Independent studies were a great way to learn about new and complicated things like computers. Photo by Chrise Rubenstein.

Normal classes just weren't exciting enough for some students. For those select few who dared to venture out on their own, there were independent studies. Independent studies allowed students who choose to take them, to learn at their own pace along with the challenge of teaching themselves. The focus teacher, Mrs. Valente, was, of course, a HUGE help. Joey Katz commented on independent studies saying, "It is a great opportunity to do something you enjoy and actually get graded for it." Camden Walker, who chose to take AP Chemistry as an independent study, said, "I didn't have two periods free this year and I wanted to take Chemistry since I will double-major in it in college and I want to try for college credit." And, of course, we couldn't leave Mrs. Valente out. She worked harder than anyone to help the students with their independent studies. David Lawson summed it all up when he said, "I love my independent study for one reason: Mrs. Valente. Few people would put up with all she has to from her students." Karen McGuillicuddy followed up by exclaiming, "Likewise!"

Hangouts

What's going on after the bell rings at 2:15?

The Band Eric Wall and Andy Fabian got together at fellow band member, Jay Underwood's basement to practice their music. Their band was called "Assisted Twister." Photo by Michael Hodge.

Everyone was either anticipating or dreading the bell that rung at 2:15, which ended another day of school. For some seniors, it meant that they could go home and relax their tired brains after a hard six hour school day. Alden Hingle said, "I enjoy sitting on the deck of my house, and shooting the breeze with my friends." And for other seniors, it meant the beginning of a work day. "Working in the back of the pharmacy totally stresses me out," said Valerie Thompson, as she referred to her job at CVS.

For other seniors, there was not much time to hangout or work after school. Not only did students work on their academics at school, but they were also committed to after school sports. Many of the seniors participated in more than one sport throughout the year. "It's a challenge to juggle school and sports," said Becky Doyal, who plays field hockey, basketball, and soccer for Stafford, "but the reward is worth it."

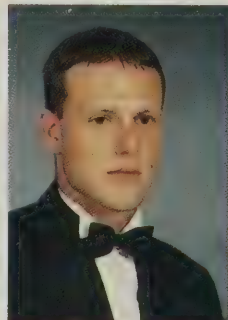

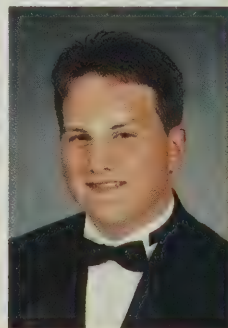

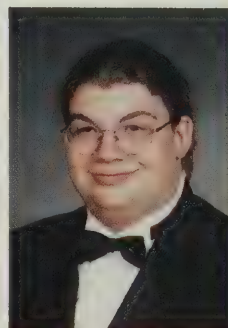

And if they weren't doing a sport after school, you could find seniors working out at the YMCA. The YMCA kept many of Stafford's students in shape throughout the school year. "The YMCA is where my friends go," Willy Anderson said, "and I want to get buff."

The class of 1999 took their last year to the extreme. From painting up and showing school spirit at the football games to hanging out at the local hangouts after school. "My senior year has been full of memories to last a lifetime," said Julie Marten. Story by Laurie Mathias.

Walk like a Man

The juniors and Seniors got a chance to crossdress for a day

The shrill call of cheerleaders and the grunts of football players are all part of a normal football game. But something at the October 24 game was amiss. What was it? The annual Powder Puff game.

Although there were a few variations from tradition this year the game was exciting as usual. The game was played at Gayle Middle School, a far cry from the Indians home territory, but the fans didn't seem to mind. "It was the best Powder Puff game ever held," exclaimed Kristi Doebal. Another broken tradition was that of the seniors winning. The juniors dominated throughout most of the game, winning a stunning victory over the seniors. The seniors were rumored to have cheated. Melissa Rose said, "Shhhhh...! We put a guy out on the field. He has a wig on."

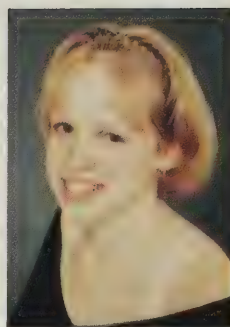

The girls were certainly pumped to be out on the field for a change. The seniors yelled threats at the juniors, while the juniors tried to remain good natured. The freshly shaven cheerleaders and dance team were just as fun to watch. The guys were apparently very excited to explore their feminine sides. Michael Doremus said sadly, "I'm not as pretty as the other girls." Story by Bri Bevan.

Making the Play Running with the ball, Laura Crigler picks up major yards with a sweep around the end. The annual Powder Puff Football game proved very exciting for all the spectators, not to mention the players. Into the World

Seniors prepare for life after Stafford

The long-awaited senior year is not all fun and games. That last year of high school means college applications and SATs, choosing jobs and finding lifelong interests. All of this comes in one of the busiest years of one's life! For the first time most seniors will be traveling away from our beloved Stafford County and making their home in a place not-so-familiar.

To prepare for the SATs, most seniors took SAT prep classes. "I have to take them in between cheerleading practice and school, not to mention my own free time," stated Jennie Tuscany. Genny Rankin also took classes in preparation for her SATs. "I think I want to go to Randolph Macon, but I've still got some time to decide," Genny added. Some students have their decision made early. Jennifer Rollins had no problem, "I want to go to Washington and Lee!" she laughed. Deciding what to do with your life is a big decision and its often crammed into the last minute for seniors. The deadline for college applications forces some indecisive students to make up their minds a little faster!

Some students' plans are a little different after high school. Students involved in vocational classes, like Brad Burrus, hope to attend trade schools to pursue their skills. Gloria Jackson, a cosmetology student hopes to, "work in a salon somewhere after graduation." For many, the skills they take with them from Stafford will provide them with a living for the rest of their life.

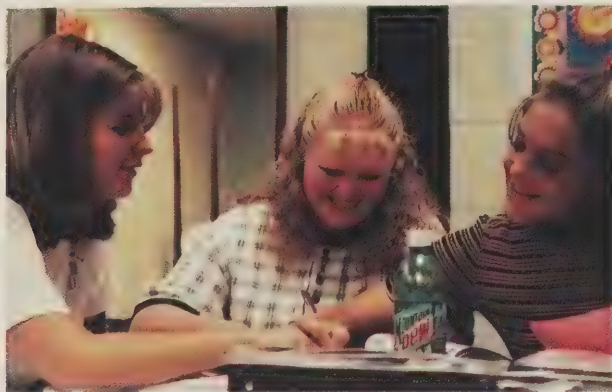

Whether going to college or on to other things, seniors are making their way into their life. The time has arrived to go into the world with all the knowledge Stafford High has provided! Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz.

Hitting the Books Christian Hilchey browses through a college brochure. As the seniors prepared to send college applications and take SAT's, many could be found in the guidance office, searching for help. Photo by Laura Crigler.

Advanced Classes

Students who Strive to Succeed

Lending a Hand Jennie Tuscany and Jackie Braja help Jessica Lee with her class work. Working together was productive and fun for these three girls.

Headaches, tension, and stress!! Students who enjoy challenging their minds often take advanced courses, but the work involved is difficult and extensive. Although some students like Kevin Cogley, enjoy the "challenge of the work."

Advanced Placement Chemistry is an advanced course that is two class periods long! Eric Wall and Jay Underwood challenged themselves by enrolling in this class. Advanced Placement Chemistry and other A.P. courses are weighted, in which the grade point system adds a point to your final grade. For example if your first grade is a 3.0 (B) then it is raised to 4.0 (A). Meaghan Wilson likes this because she said, "whenever I receive an A, it raises my grade point average". (An A=5.0 in weighted classes).

Advanced courses are offered in Science, English, Math, History, and many other courses. Craig Hamilton felt that, "standard classes are just too easy".

Many students prepared for college by taking Advanced Placement and Dual Enrollment courses. Lindsey Diebold claimed advanced classes, "look good for college and allow me to apply myself instead of always being so bored in class." Like many students, Lindsey is enrolled in many advanced classes.

Advanced classes are long and tough, yet the accomplishments of learning equal success. Taking an advanced class is an excellent way to shine in a certain subject. Colleges appreciate students who challenge themselves and think towards the future. Story by Amber Leigh Carpenter.

Class Officers

Hard work and a lot of responsibility, but it's very rewarding

This year, the senior class officers, "Worked really hard! We had to organize the teacher's breakfasts, do the announcements, organize graduation, the senior trip, the dinner-dance, t-shirts, and the senior picnic," exclaimed Becky Doyal. Becky was Secretary of the Senior class, Roy Perry was President, Kevin Oulette was Vice-President, Janean Neal was Treasurer, and Bonnie Combs was Class Reporter. It's a huge responsibility. "My favorite part of being Vice President was representing the Senior student body," said Kevin. "It would have been a lot harder without the help of Roy Perry." Roy said, "We worked really hard. It's OK Roy, we know you're a superhero, not to mention President. "Well, I did organize the pig roast, but that didn't work out as planned." All in all, the senior class officers will agree that being an officer was hard work, but all of the officers did a great job and the year went smoothly. Story by Ashley Dameron.

Three Seasons Athletes

The Sports Dominators

Every year there are a handful of seniors that play three seasons of sports. It makes you wonder how they did it? How did they play three sports and still have time to get their social and academic life in order? Well - "It's hard..." says Becky Doyal, "but somehow between practices and that big game you have to take time to study for that big calculus test the next day." Becky Doyal was a captain on the field hockey team in the fall, played basketball in the winter, and soccer in the spring. She also made time in her busy schedule to fulfill the duties of being a senior class officer.

Playing three seasons of sports may be tough, but as Carl Cabaniss says, "I like keeping busy. It keeps me on track and out of trouble, but sometimes I wish I could take a season off, so I can spend time with my friends, just chill and kick it old school style." Carl Cabaniss ran cross country in the fall, winter track, and soccer in the spring. He was a key asset on each team he was on. Along with playing three sports, Carl also was a member of the NHS.

Seniors have a lot to live up to, especially in athletics. They are expected to be the leaders of the teams and be a positive role model for the younger athletes. The seniors that play three or more sports did more than live up to their expectations. Congratulations to all of you who have participated in three seasons of sports throughout high school. I hope you had three great seasons!! Story by Bobbi Decatur.

Ready for a Big Change

Well, they're almost there. The junior class had experienced three years of high school and they were finally ready for their shot to be at the top of the school. After going through the high school trauma, they finally realized what it was all about. "I really enjoy being able to know almost everyone without even trying," said Megan Grigsby, "I've been with these people for so long that I feel like everybody knows everyone else."

The junior year for many was more than just a transition from being an underclassmen, for a lot of the class it was a year of growing up. "I just hope next year our class is as cool as the seniors are this year," Matt Matter said. Stephen Love contributed, "I don't think about the other classes that much. I'm havin' fun just chillin' with the 9ers (the name denoted to a group of junior friends)."

The class of 2000 certainly had a variety of thoughts about Stafford, but one thought remained the same. They were all glad to only have one year left. Oliver Goldman said, "I can't wait to be a senior—it's gonna rock!" Story by Nicole Brors.

Summer

The Junior class wasn't staying home to read a good book during the summer of 1998. Many students took the opportunity and went on vacations or went to camps. Some students traveled throughout the United States and a few students traveled to other countries. These experiences of new surroundings and meeting new people of different cultures were memories to last a lifetime. "This summer I went to Scotland, and all the people were really nice, but they talked pretty weird," said Megan Duvall. Many took advantage of the nice weather, and took the time to do the things they loved. "Our cheerleading squad went to camp at UVA. Although it was really strenuous, our varsity squad really bonded," said Amber Carpenter. Many students seemed to take their vacations in Florida this summer. For instance, Bobbi Decatur said, "I visited Disney World for a week, and I rode the 'Tower of Terror' many times," and William Neese said, "I vacationed in Florida for two weeks, and visited Disney World, Daytona Beach, and this really cool place called Ron Jon's Surf Shop."

Many students also took the opportunity to hit the beaches. Heather Demko planned on being at Myrtle Beach for two weeks, but a hurricane was predicted and they had to evacuate after a week. Even though vacations might have been cut short, students still had fun while they lasted. And being juniors, they only had one more summer to remember before going to college, so they were sure to make the most of it. Story by Laurie Mathias.

Major Roles

Role models play an important part in students' lives.

Almost everyone has someone to look up to, or someone to idolize. It's no different for high school students. Juniors needed someone to believe in; whether it was someone in a band, a fellow classmate, or even their parents.

When we were younger we looked up to cartoon characters and super heroes. But as we grew older, our role models matured with us. In up coming years, our role models will become spouses, colleagues, and bosses.

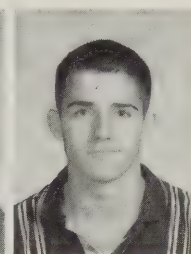

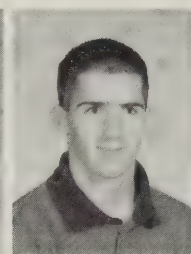

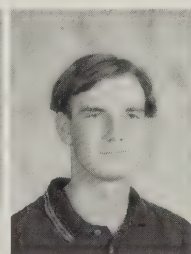

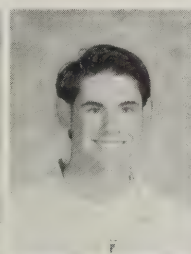

At this age we are influenced by our classmates. Kristi Doebel commented, "I look up to my classmate, Katie Carter." Eric Wall was caught saying, "Eric Cooper is my hero!" Others followed positive examples of classmates by joining clubs and participating in school functions.

Other role models for this year's Juniors were of course parents and the school's faculty. "My mom is my role model, because she is always there for me," Christina Cushing said thoughtfully. Parents have always been and will always be positive role models, but the administration is just as important. While smiling, Jay Underwood added, "Mr. Pugh is my role model."

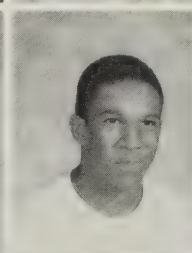

In such a confusing time, high school students needed someone to model themselves after. The class of 2000 had picked excellent ones. Story by Bri Bevan.

Officers

The junior class officers work hard for SHS

Everyone remembers placing their votes and choosing their class officers. Once the voting was done, what were their responsibilities? "Being a junior class officer is really important because we have to take care of all the planning for Prom," said Jessica Player. In addition to their own school work and other extras, the junior class officers were responsible not only for Prom, but various other activities as well. "We also have to try and get everyone to pay their dues and participate in fund raisers because that helps us get money for our senior year," added Bobbi Decatur.

The junior class officers admitted they also had a lot of great times during the year. Organizing fund raisers and decorating the float during spirit week were hard work but also enjoyable. Planning new activities and heading up the class was a huge job but they "got along well all year and tried to make things fun," commented Oliver Goldman. School Leaders Class officers had to represent their class and fulfill various duties of their office. "You get to make a lot of decisions for your class. So you have to be serious... at least sometimes!" said Oliver Goldman. Photo by Matt Catalano.

Memories

Junior Friendships

Fun, trust, and togetherness is what this year's junior friendships were all about. Many memories were made in the fall at the powder puff game. The junior girls worked extremely well together and beat their rival seniors. Carrie Loving said, "Sorry seniors, but you knew we were gonna win." The strong cooperation that the girls held, enabled the team to score during their first offensive play. Awesome teamwork, Juniors!

Junior year was filled with new experiences, such as becoming upperclassmen. Many students played on Varsity sport teams for the first time. While playing sports, juniors made many strong friendships. Laurie Mathias went to Varsity cheerleading camp at UVA this summer. She said, "Cheerleading camp really brought our squad together and helped us realize how each individual is important." Sports were committed activities in which friends bonded.

Friends are made to last forever. Jan Augustine, Jennifer Brindle, and Lindsey Diebold have been friends for years. "My girls don't judge me. I can eat and eat in front of them; we are always munching," said Jan Augustine. Many other juniors felt relaxed and comfortable with their friends. Problems were forgotten when friends were near. Lisa Woods said she likes hanging out with her friends, "to get away from the guys!"

"Friends are sweet because they pick you up when you are down," said Christina Cushing. The countless laughs and occasional tears will always be remembered. With one more year left of school, juniors looked toward the future, but they would never forget the past. Story by Amber Leigh Carpenter.

Trends

These days the trend is to not be trendy . . . or is it??

Carin Stoelker's outlook on trends, "I don't know that I've ever really participated in a trend that I thought was really cool." Stephanie Heffernan, Jennie Tuscany, Courtney Blake, and others dredged up memories from middle school and even elementary school to find their favorite trends. Stephanie's favorite was, "those notebooks that everybody had with their friends were the best!" Jennie liked, "tight rolls and big, bushy bangs." Courtney remembers, "that whole converse era," as her favorite trend. "I guess it just goes to show that 'what's here today is gone tomorrow,'" remarked Maria Hingle.

However, other students' favorite trends were still going strong. "I love cut-jeans because they're scruffy looking. I feel like a real man when I wear 'em!" said Matt Catalano. Heather Demko enjoyed "BELLY-BUTTON PIERCING!!!" Jean Cornwell loved wearing "those little white shoes that everyone has!" Under those little white shoes everyone—according to Matt Culbreath—was wearing "long, multi-colored socks!"

No matter what the trend was, or who participated in it, one thing will be for sure: years from now we're all gonna look back and think "Man, that was so cool!" Because I mean, face it, that's all a trend is!! Story by Ashley Dameron.

Automobiles

The fight for a spot in the Lot.

To be a junior and get a parking permit was a huge privilege considering that the parking was very limited for the students. Any student who wanted to drive to school had to fill out an application to park. Filling this application out on after school activities and sports was just one step to becoming eligible to park. "I believe I was very lucky to get a parking permit considering how many kids applied for one," said Jessica Player.

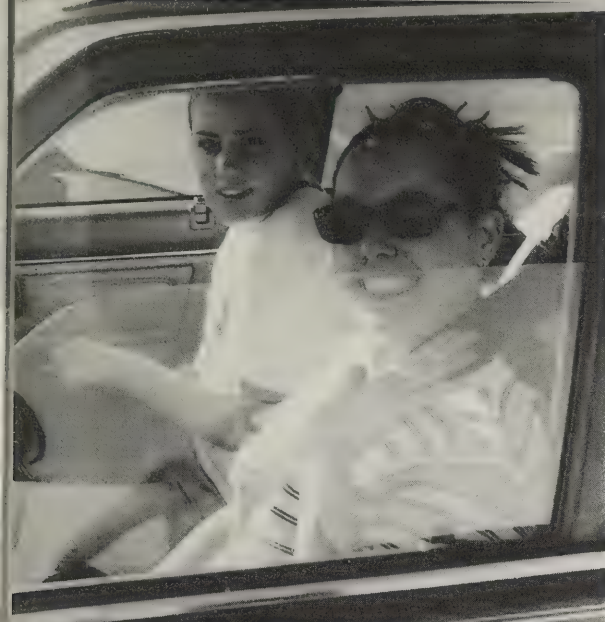

This year was also the year that juniors got their first cars. This was a very big change from having mom pick them up after school or from having to ride the cheese everyday. So not only did juniors get the chance to park at school but they also were able to show off their cars that they just got. "I'm really glad I don't have ride the bus anymore. I hated riding the bus," said Melissa Wilson.

Many juniors were very excited to finally be able to drive this year, but what they didn't realize was that they had to fight for a spot in the lot. Parking at school for many students was a good chance to show off their cars and systems. "My truck is awesome..." said Jeff Swidrak, "...It's easy to get out of the parking lot because everyone gets out of the way from 9'er Mobile."

Parking was and will always be a big deal for juniors. The freedom that comes with getting your first car and driving to school is one of the best things about your junior year, so live it up juniors! Story by Bobbi Decatur.

Homework

Friday night and you're ready to go chill with your buds.

But then, like a brick to the head, it hits you—"I didn't do my Physics homework!" Your mom told you if you didn't finish all of your homework by that night, you weren't going anywhere all weekend. That's nowhere, n-o-w-h-e-r-e. And guess what? You, being all psyched that Friday was finally here, left it in your locker. No fun for you this weekend.

Students everywhere had experienced situations similar to this. What, you ask, did students here think of the sometimes bothersome, sometimes downright annoying task which we call homework? Well, a few students shared their feelings on the subject.

Homework was a large part of the final grade in most classes. This forced a lot of students to buckle down and actually do it. George Shoffstall said simply, "Do it or fail." Sometimes that was just the bottom line. However, while one teacher placed real emphasis on homework, another teacher could have placed more emphasis on tests. Said Jaimie Rittenour, "I take a zero (on the homework), and try to do well on the tests. Most of the time it all evens out."

Other students shared a more opinionated view on homework. Brett Curtis said, "Only tyrants give homework."

The controversial views of homework continued to fuel debate throughout the school. Would our children be annoyed by this thing we call homework, just as our parents were? Only time would tell if this "oppressor of fun" would ever be abolished. Story by Kathy Gardner.

Ring Dance

No longer time for a dance, the ring ceremony becomes a breakfast

This year, tradition was broken with the class of 2000 when the ring dance was temporarily branded as "out of service". As the administrators decided that a dance had to be held after a school sponsored activity, the junior class officers got to work in coming up with a solution to the problem of finding a way to distribute class rings. The solution: A ring breakfast.

Many people enjoyed the ring break-fast, as it was a quick and easy come in, get your ring, and leave kind of thing. Josh Thompson said, "I liked the ring breakfast, it was really short and didn't last very long. Plus I got my ring."

Other people, curious about halted tradition, had different opinions. Diana Young said, "The ring breakfast was nice but I really would have liked to have a dance. I've heard that they were really fun."

Other students were solely intent on the mission of getting their ring and get-ting out. Meaghan Wilson said, "I just got my ring and left. That's all I was there to do."

Whether there to socialize or get your ring and run, the ring breakfast proved to be a success. Who knows, maybe the class of 2001 will pick up the new tradition. Story by Stephanie Heffernan.

Ready for a Big Change

Sophomore year, what exactly was the purpose? Well, to most students, it was a step up from not being a freshman anymore. It was a welcomed change and the class of 2001 finally realized the impact of having only one school year behind them. They slowly began to change and liked the idea that they had taken a small step up the ladder.

Usually students weren't really looking that far ahead yet. In fact, Johnny Cabaniss stated, "I haven't even changed at all. I'm still as stupid and immature as I was last year." Others, however, have a more positive outlook. "I have become more respected by upperclassmen and more intimidating to people smaller than me," said Nick Whelpley. Ashley Roberson agrees, "I'm not as afraid as I was last year because I know there's little freshmen running around and I'm no longer the youngest."

Most sophomores had a hard time being serious; they were still too young to have to worry about colleges or careers like their fellow upperclassmen. They just seemed to be glad they weren't freshmen any more. The attitude of most—as expressed by Justin Hogan—was, "I'm just chillin'." Story by Nicole Brors.

Spirit

Blue, Gold and White

Students of the sophomore class were seeing Stafford at its height of school spirit, whether painting up like Indians at a Friday night football game, or up in the stands cheering at the top of their lungs at a home basketball game.

Every Friday was considered "Blue and Gold Day," and sports teams would dress out supporting their teams, cheerleaders would decorate the halls and stairwells, and teachers would dress down wearing blue and gold. Mike Groff said, "I'm fairly new here so I'm still getting used to the whole 'school spirit' thing. My old school never had as much spirit as Stafford has."

Students at Stafford supported both academic teams and sports teams. Spirit ran high, although there were very few pep rallies during the year. "I liked dressing up for blue and gold day because I could wear all the blue and gold that I wanted to and no one made fun of me," said Courtney Johnston.

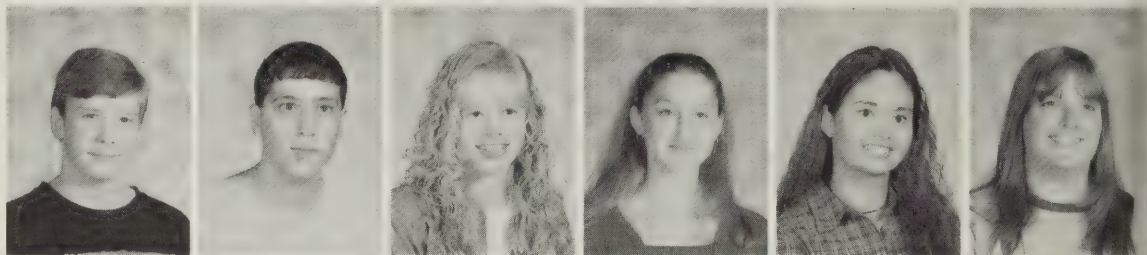

Many students of the sophomore class participated in spirit week which involved different days of how they were to show their school spirit. For instance, "Get up and go day", "Clash Day", "Twin Day". "I think that we enjoy dressing different and a little crazy during spirit week, because it puts a little fun into our day," said Kristen Maddox.

The sophomore class took great pleasure in showing their school spirit during the 1998 year. Students enjoyed the unity of the school with a little twist sometimes, like dressing in blue and gold from head to toe. Story by Laurie Mathias.

Pumped Up

Sophomores struggle to stay fit

There has always been the battle of the bulge and the sophomores have put up a good fight this year. With so many fun physical activities to choose from, there were hardly any excuses not to become fit. "I have no time to sit still during P.E.," exclaimed Danielle Blosser.

Beyond the normal P.E. requirements, students had the chance to become involved in non-school and school affiliated sports. Some of these sports included Field Hockey, Soccer, Football, Lacrosse and Swimming. A lot of students took their sports so seriously that they pumped iron to become more muscular. As Cristi Doebal said, "I feel weak if I don't lift weights for one day." The weight room was very packed this year due to the aspiring athletes.

Others did not participate in sports. Instead they worked out through their Physical Education Classes. These students got to try many different sports including Tennis, Weight-lifting, Basketball, and many more Health inspiring activities. Story by Bri Bevan.

Family

Siblings in the Hall of SHS

For some people being at home with siblings is bad enough! What about those at Stafford who also have to see annoying brothers and sisters at school too? Well, "its not that bad, I really hardly ever see her," said Jennifer Covington of her sister Jessica. All over the school sisters and brothers can be found. Craig Brooks' sister, Colleen, was a freshmen this year. "It's just hard to believe she's old enough already," Craig added. "My sister, Allison, and I see each other at home, school, and cheerleading, but it's not bad," said Genny Rankin.

Siblings can sometimes be helpful and even missed. "I was glad my sister was still here when I was a freshmen, that way I got to meet a lot of people," said Brittany Wood, "Sometimes I miss her here."

As bad as they may seem sometimes, siblings are not always that bad! "I'm glad Dave and I are in school together, it doesn't bother me at all," Jennie Tuscany concluded. Seeing a familiar face is always nice, even if it is a family member! Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz.

Electives

Optional classes that widen education

Being an aide or taking an elective allowed students to take a break from their standard classes. Sara Bailey said, "I like computers because it is a lot easier than my other classes." Sarah Johnson agreed and said she is in computers "because I like to type." Besides computers, electives include Art, Drama, study hall, Cosmetology, and many others. Melissa Love and Krista Eck are in journalism because "Mr. Driver is cool!" Many sophomores were aides instead of taking an elective class. Most of them were office aides and P.E. aides. Barry Samuels summed the job up for all by saying, "Being an aide is not hard; there's never any homework."

Working

The vital part of Stafford High ...

CRASH!! Another one bites the dust. You just ran into the back of someone and dumped your tray all over the floor, yourself, and the person you just ran into. You look around helplessly as students stand and give you an ovation for your stellar performance—only you wish you could melt into the floor. Then out of the woodwork they come; the janitors, to clean the floor. A lunch lady or two come and take your tray and give you napkins to wipe the ketchup off your new white shirt. The nurse tells you that if you have any other clothes you can change in clinic's bathroom.

The cafeteria ladies, janitors, secretaries, guards, nurses, and all the other important staff members took care of our school with pride. They were repaid with respect and catchy nicknames. Their efforts were really appreciated. "It's nice that they're here to help us," said Kristi Bryant. Jack Richardson commented, "They keep this place very neat." Malia, who was standing nearby said, "Yeah and they put up with all our stuff!! They work hard!!" The student body agreed that these staff members worked hard, didn't leave messes, cleaned up after ours, and just generally took care of us.

You're probably wondering 'Why on Earth would someone want to clean up and take care of a bunch of rowdy high school kids?' Unanimously, the answer is "The kids! Most of the time—99.9% of the time. It ain't the money honey!!" explained the lunchladies: Mamma, Grandma, Moe, Barb, Carol. See, they really did love us!!

Driving

Behind the Wheel

Most Sophomores had the opportunity to take Behind the Wheel this year. Students had to pass this course in order to receive their driver's license. So most kids took this class very seriously. Angela Fiendt said, "I'm glad my birthday is early because I am one of the first people to take Behind the Wheel." This was a big step into adulthood for the sophomores. Many of them already had cars waiting for them after they completed the course. Even though this class is very slow-moving (literally), students learned the basic techniques of reverse, parking, and driving a five speed transmission.

The driving course included driving on Mountain View Road and taking the driving test in down town Fredericksburg. The kids were tested on speed, control, stopping, staying steady on the road, and other various things. Taking Behind the Wheel was the last step to getting their license. Most students could not wait to take behind the wheel, but there were a few kids who didn't mind it. "I'm not in a big rush to take it..." said Jessica Nimmo, "...because I won't get to drive to school until next year anyway." No matter if you had an early or late birthday, most every sophomore got to take behind the wheel sometime during the year. "It really doesn't matter if I take the course or not because I don't go anywhere anyway," said Jenny Harding. Well sophomores, next year is your year to drive! Behind the wheel was just one more step to it. Drivers beware!

Construction

Through the balmy months of June, July, and August of 1998, new rooms were erected, the library redesigned, and the upturned linoleum on the stairs finally fixed.

The school was under construction all summer long. But when the day for school to open, the eighth of September, finally rolled around, a problem arose. The work wasn't finished. So what happened? Well, the first day's opening was delayed by four hours, and school went on. However, this was just the first of many obstacles brought on by the need for repairs in our school.

The largest problem students found with extended construction was that the long-awaited new lockers were not put up. As a result, students shared the old lockers, since there were not enough lockers to accommodate every person who attended the school. "You can't fit all your books in your locker, there's just not enough room," said Lee Bumbrey. Also, sharing a locker with another person sometimes became extremely confusing. This was especially so if you had the same books for certain classes. Amanda Johnson said, "Teachers complain about us getting the wrong books from our lockers, mostly our locker partner's."

Then there were the other changes to the school. When returning, the school looked a little different, which caused some students disorientation. Sean Bast said, "The construction confused me a lot at the beginning of the year. I kept getting lost since the school looked different, and I was late a lot because of this."

Finally, there was the most obvious hurdle brought on by the construction. Construction was often done in the hallways and stairwells. "It's a real hassle because we already have to go through the crowded halls, and the construction is sometimes in the way," said Joyce Owens. Jason Laperle said, "I can't stand the construction, it gets in the way of everything and everybody." Ashlie Johnson said, "The changes will be cool when they're finished, but right now they're a little inconvenient."

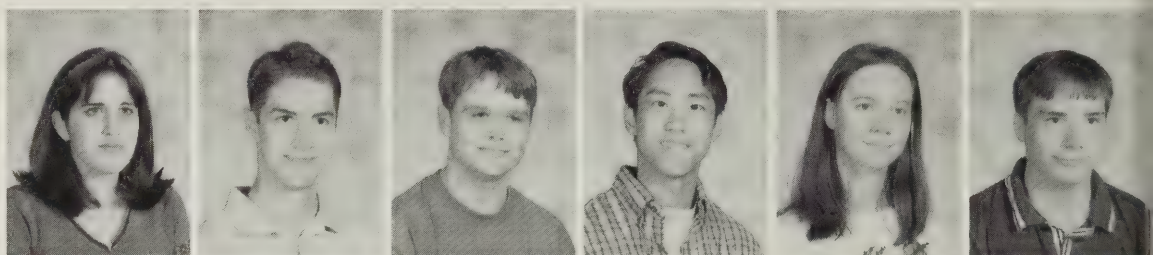

Even though the construction caused a lot of problems, in the long run the cosmetic features and practicality of our school building would be improved. Said Paul Kalson, "Eventually the quality of our school will be better." Also, Matt Smith said, "It's going to turn out better and be worth all the trouble." Patrick Perrone also pointed out a positive of the construction. "A good thing coming out of the construction is a bigger parking lot for us next year."

In any case, all students agreed that the new classrooms, better library, and improved overall environment were well worth the obstacles. Though there was still a lot to be done before the construction was finished, it gave everyone, students and teachers alike, something to look forward to during the latter months of the school year. Story by Kathy Gardner.

Quiet Please! Raymond Baker studies material for an important test. Many students did the same in the new library, which was very quiet since it was closed off. In past years, the upper walls of the library were open and allowed noise from hallway traffic to invade the library. Other changes, such as the new loft in the library, were also among the improvements. Photo by Erin Hughes.

Officers

Class officers have the final say when it came to the 10th grade.

It was a busy year for the Sophomore class officers. From the homecoming float, to dues, to money-making fund-raisers, the officers definitely had their hands full. Not only do these four sophomore role models have to organize events for their class, but they also have to make sure that important things like float building, fund-raising and class meetings are organized and done.

In running for their class office, the officers had specific "missions" that they were on for their class. Vice-President Krista Eck said that she wanted to "learn leadership skills [she] will need for the future."

Secretary Ian Campbell said, "I ran to do something for my class, so that in the future we'll have better things for ourselves." Whereas Treasurer Richard Dickinson said, "I thought it would be cool to have the final say-so in all of the sophomore class matters."

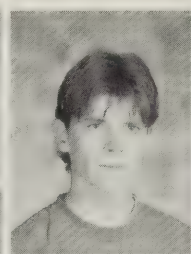

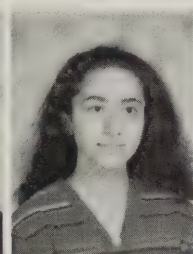

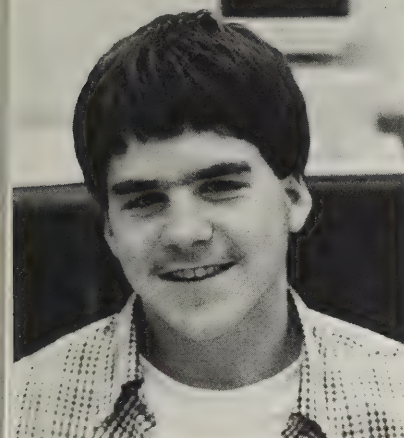

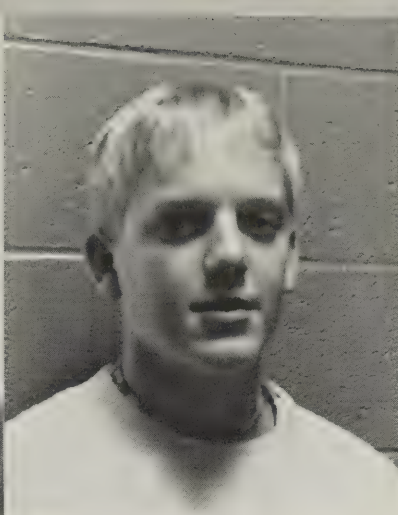

Being a class officer wasn't all work and no fun, though. It was a chance to help out fellow classmates while having fun at the same time. President Heather Akin said, "I love being an officer because it is a fun way to get others involved!"

All-in-all, being a class officer is a way to accomplish several jobs, ending in a feeling of supreme gratification. Left behind are memories and a connection to other classmates. Krista Eck commented, "I just wanted to make this school year a memorable one." Richard Dickinson followed by exclaiming, "We made the sophomore class the best class in Stafford High School!" Story by Stephanie Heffernan.

Ready for a Big Change

Well, that was it folks. The completion of freshman year. We've all been there—through the pain and many remarks of "Freshmen, ugh!..." We all have survived, and eventually we all found our place in this conglomeration of diversity we call school.

The class of 2002 was no exception; they all got used to the ways of Stafford, but they still had their share of feeling like the small ones of the bunch. "It was a difficult experience—I went from being the oldest in the school to being the youngest," stated Lorne King, "It was like kindergarten all over again." Teddy Sweeney added, "It's so much bigger here. It's harder to find my way around." "Yeah, I'm not used to being towered over," added Justin Olson.

Though scared at first, freshmen soon found out that it wasn't so bad after all. Ashley Dowling said, "I like the freedom of high school; I just can't wait to pick on the freshman next year." Story by Nicole Brors.

First Impression

It's a whole new world in here.....

Walking into a school filled with over 1900 students can be a really scary experience. It is something that freshman students have to go through every year. Usually Stafford has a freshmen orientation that gives the students a chance to meet their teachers and let them know roughly where they need to go. This year, students didn't have that chance due to renovations, so they walked into the school not knowing where anything was or where to go. Unfortunately, that gave the upperclassmen the chance to do their upperclassmen duty and get the freshman even more lost than they already were. "I came here last year because I took Latin, and walking into the school this year blew me away; nothing looked the same," said Britt Smith. Many students got use to the changes that renovations brought to us.

The locker difficulties were also among the many new things that freshman had to get use to in the beginning. Sara Brown said, "Last year I was in a private school, and this is my first year being in a public school. Things here are totally different! I have to break my way through just to use my locker."

Some freshmen come to high school with the scary ideas in their heads of how high school is going to be. Buffy Ripley said, "High School was scary at first, but once I met the right people, it wasn't as scary." Stafford's tradition, "get the freshman lost," lives on; it just seemed that it was a little bit easier this year. Story by Laurie Mathias.

Where am I?

Freshman wandered the halls

High school is hard enough when you have to learn new faces and get to know new teachers, but the freshmen have it worst. On top of all the normal back to school hassles, the freshmen have the difficult task of learning the in and outs of the school grounds, not to mention the short cuts. "It's hard to know which staircase to take. I never know where I am going to end up," said Ashley Belyea. This seemed to be a major concern for some. Kyle Hubbard memorized his school map during the summer.

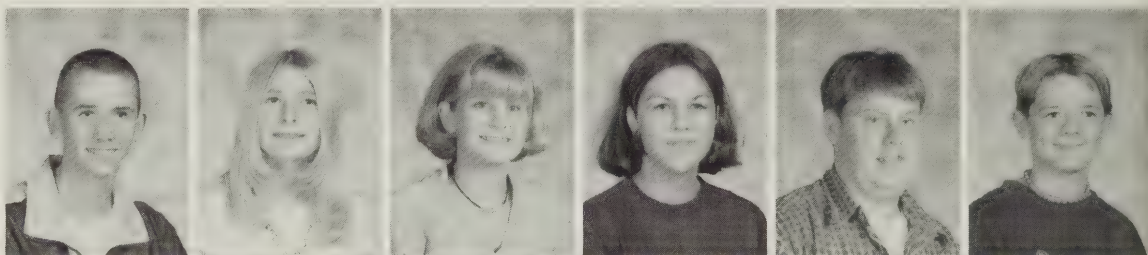

Some freshmen already knew their way around from the past activities here, but there was still confusion due to the recent construction and overcrowding. Outside of the Gym hallway there was always a traffic jam. "I don't know where I am!" exclaimed an exasperated Mike Carter.

Another problem for freshmen was finding the right room. Between "Ea" and "E" English rooms and "Sc" and "Sa" rooms it's easy to get confused. "I walked into a room full of seniors and they all laughed at me when I asked where I was," said Austin Price. Story by Bri Bevan.

What do I need? Dazed and confused Jessica Lindsey, otherwise known as Duke, searches her locker for books. Freshmen needed to allot extra time to find all necessary class materials. The added confusion of a new school didn't ease the situation. Photo by Jennifer Yednock.

Finding Friends

Making new friends

The first day of school can make almost anyone nervous. When it's your first day at Stafford altogether, the feeling can be enough to make you crazy. Every year, a new "batch" of freshmen come into the world at Stafford, overwhelmed with the task of making friends. "I was nervous at first, but I'd met a lot of people at cheerleading and stuff so that made me feel better," said Sarah Sullivan. Ashley Stroud was "glad to have classes with some middle school friends. That made everything easier, to walk into a class and see people who were already friends, but I liked seeing new people too."

Coming into a new school full of unfamiliar faces can be difficult. "At first I didn't wanna say too much in my classes 'cause there were a lot of people I'd never seen before, but after awhile I got to be friends with them," commented Nicole White. Others relied on the help of older brothers or sisters. Taylor Wood felt better because he knew people through his sister, Brittany, who was a senior. "I knew people from Britt and that was cool. Some of them would talk to me in the hall and I felt like there were more people who knew me," added Taylor. Finding friends is never easy, but at Stafford the process seemed to get easier day by day. Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz.

SCORE!

Freshmen athletes give their best

Although freshmen were confused about the procedures of high school, they knew exactly how to play school sports. Freshmen athletes gave their best as they played sports such as golf, football, cheerleading, swimming, track, tennis, field hockey, basketball, cross country, soccer, wrestling, and gymnastics. Lindsey Jones, a devoted basketball player, said that basketball "is fun and I have been playing for a long time."

Crystal Gooden ran winter track. She liked the sport "because it is fun and gets me in shape for the spring". There were other freshmen who played two sports. Ashley Dixon cheered for both freshmen football and basketball teams. "Cheerleading is a good experience; you get to meet a lot of great people," said Ashley.

Emiley Martens and Sally York were on the swim team. They both agreed that swimming was "hard work but it pays off." With exceptional rising athletes, there is going to be a lot of success ahead for sports. Story by Amber Leigh Carpenter.

Lunch Time

Freshmen had no trouble fitting into the cafeteria

It was the first day of school. You had gone through the first 4 or 5 periods of the day and you had not seen a single familiar face in any of your classes. You walked through the halls of this strange new building, which was bigger and even more crowded than your middle school, in order to get to lunch. You walked into the cafeteria and saw a big clump of your friends, familiar faces in the new and exciting world of high school.

To your extreme satisfaction, lunch in the high school was way different than in your little old middle school. "We didn't have to sit in teams!! It was great!!" exclaimed Amy Galavan. Freshmen liked the idea that they got to eat with students of all grades. "I like it a lot better because you can eat with the older kids; it's more fun and you get to meet more people," said Tracey Lipscomb. "Yeah, lunch in the high school is cool because you get to sit wherever you want and everybody has a place to be," said Emily Ryan.

The only complaint that came from the freshmen—and the rest of the school was that "it's too crowded," said Larisa Washburn. Sorry Freshmen, but hey—it came with the territory. Story by Ashley Dameron.

What's New

Getting used to the New Surroundings

Every year Stafford enrolls a group of students from different countries and upcoming freshman. This was a big change for those students coming to a new school and for the foreign students, a new country! They had to endure the changes of not only the new school, but the changes of a whole different culture.

The foreign exchange students ranged from different parts of the world such as Japan, Denmark, and Russia and stayed in the U.S. for a year. The change in the schooling was very different. "I should be in College right now. I was supposed to graduate in the class of '98 in Denmark, but the schooling here is longer, so when I leave here, I will go to college at 16," said Nicholi Sand.

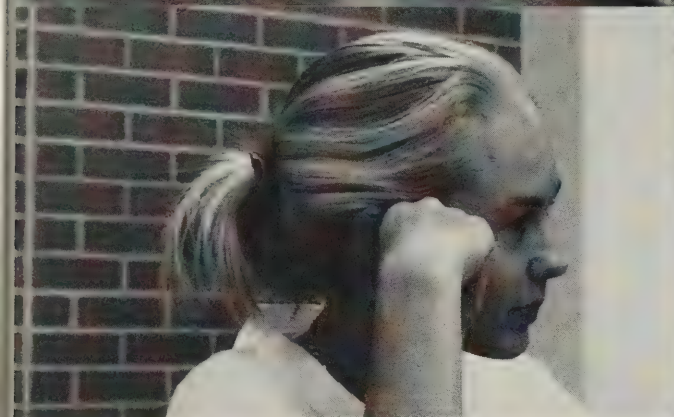

Learning the new language in most cases was very hard, let alone having to translate work in classes. It was double the work just to stay up with what the teacher was saying. Seiko Matsumoto from Japan said, "It was harder at the beginning of the year to take notes and understand my teachers, but now I am beginning to understand everything much better."

The Freshman had a very different year as well. They were introduced to many new students and had to get used to the much bigger size of the school. "Finding my way around to my classes the first week or so was hard, but it's something I got used to," said Caroline Loving.

This year was definitely a different experience for the new students. Surely, the foreign students had something to write home about this year. Even though it might have been a bit difficult for the freshman students, they still made it a good year and will be looking forward to the years to come. Story by Bobbi Decatur.

Officers

The entire freshmen class has already voted.

As you sit in first period class, butterflies are whizzing around in your stomach, and you're thinking, "Why did I even run for office anyway?" The announcements have come on, and as a slew of names are being announced, the person sitting in front of you turns around and smiles. Another person yells, "Congratulations!", but you're in a daze. You've been elected a Freshman class officer, and now you serve as a voice for hundreds of students. What did it feel like to be voted a representative? Well, the class officers of 1998 shared how they felt about the job when they were elected, and while they served.

Ashley Belyea, who served as class president, said that being an officer was "an honor." Also, Britt Smith, who was voted secretary, said the best part of being a class officer was, "representing the entire freshmen class." Out of the hundreds of people who could have ran, the four officers were the ones that the class chose to speak for them.

Truly, to be voted a class officer was also a wonderful boost for self-esteem. Shanna Hylton said of being elected treasurer, "It was great knowing a lot of people supported me and voted for me."

Finally Rebekah Smart, who was voted vice president, said, "It's a great opportunity to meet people." Since in these jobs it was necessary to speak for many people, it was also necessary to speak to many people. Without input from their peers, the officers would not have been able to fulfill certain duties, such as decide whether or not to hold a picnic or start a fund-raiser for the class. For the most part, the officers enjoyed this aspect of their job.

Running for class office was not just a popularity contest for this class in 1998. If someone ran for office, they had to be willing to work for the people they represented, and they really had to want the job. The Freshmen class officers of 1998 fulfilled these duties wonderfully, and even had fun while doing them. Story by Kathy Gardner.

Lockers

Yes, amidst the mess, there is enough room for lockers... but only a few...

Due to the incredible mess our school was in, students were forced to return for the first semester of the school year to not only the school in shambles, but also a locker frenzy. Over the summer, there was a mix up over the new lockers that were supposed to be purchased by the school, which led to the sharing of lockers by virtually everyone in the school.

The sharing of lockers not only added a disorganization factor to the lives of students, but also crowded the already too tight space in between the lockers to the point of a sardine can. Freshmen, who were already under the stress of adjusting to high school life, were especially bothered by the crowded locker they were expected to share with a homeroom friend. "I really hate sharing my locker because I can't fit any of my stuff in it," said freshman Jenny Benson. Robbie Cushing said, "I hate my locker because it is really small and all beat up."

Although, there was always something to look forward to. During the month of December, students were not only waiting for the break, but also the time when they could return to their own, new locker. Irene O'Roark said, "I can't wait till we get our new lockers so I actually have some room to get in it between classes."

Certainly the locker frenzy this year came to prove all other messes at Stafford mediocre. The students, especially the dazed and confused freshmen will remember this school year as definitely one of the most, well... interesting... Story by Stephanie Heffernan.

Faculty

Making a Difference

They are the ones who help us out when we're struggling, the ones who push us to succeed, and the ones who are disappointed when we don't. No, they're not our parents, they're the faculty.

Though it seemed there were a lot of new teachers, old favorites would never be forgotten. "My favorite teacher is Mrs. Haywood because she always gave us donuts and candy and she was truly concerned about her students," said Whitney Eck. Kevin Ouelette contributed, "Mr. Schrader was the best because I felt like we were on the same level." Most students agreed that they liked the teachers that they could relate to most. "I liked Miss Blalock because she taught me lifelong lessons," said Janean Neal.

The faculty definitely had their share of students who truly appreciated them. And to some teachers, knowing that they made a difference in one student was all that mattered. As Mr. Hughes said, "They are the ones that make me forget about all of the stress; they make my job worthwhile." Story by Nicole Brors.

Facing Academics

There is only one word to describe what went on this school year—change. Besides the normal change that takes place every year, the school underwent a physical transformation as well as the nearing of the end of the millennium.

Yet in the midst of the shuffling and the adjustments, classes continued to go on as scheduled. Students still had their best and worst classes, as Genny Rankin said, “The best thing about Calculus is sitting next to Kevin Ouellette.” Michelle Jacob on the other hand took a different approach, “Art is definitely my favorite class because I get to express myself through my work.” Brian Whited commented on his favorite class—Marine Science, “I love to watch the fish swim—back and forth, back and forth.”

Everybody seemed to have their different opinions of classes. But whether they were good or bad, every student acquired some new knowledge, even if it was just to be sure to get to class on time. Story by Nicole Brors.

English

Semicolons, commas, periods! When will it all end?

Well, unfortunately, as long as you live you will have to use these elements. But at least you can learn how to use them in a fun environment where you can also learn how to articulate your opinions. Students in all areas of English classes voiced what they learned this year.

Lindsey Jones liked the discussions that took place in her classroom environment. "I learned that you don't have to win every argument as long as you're heard."

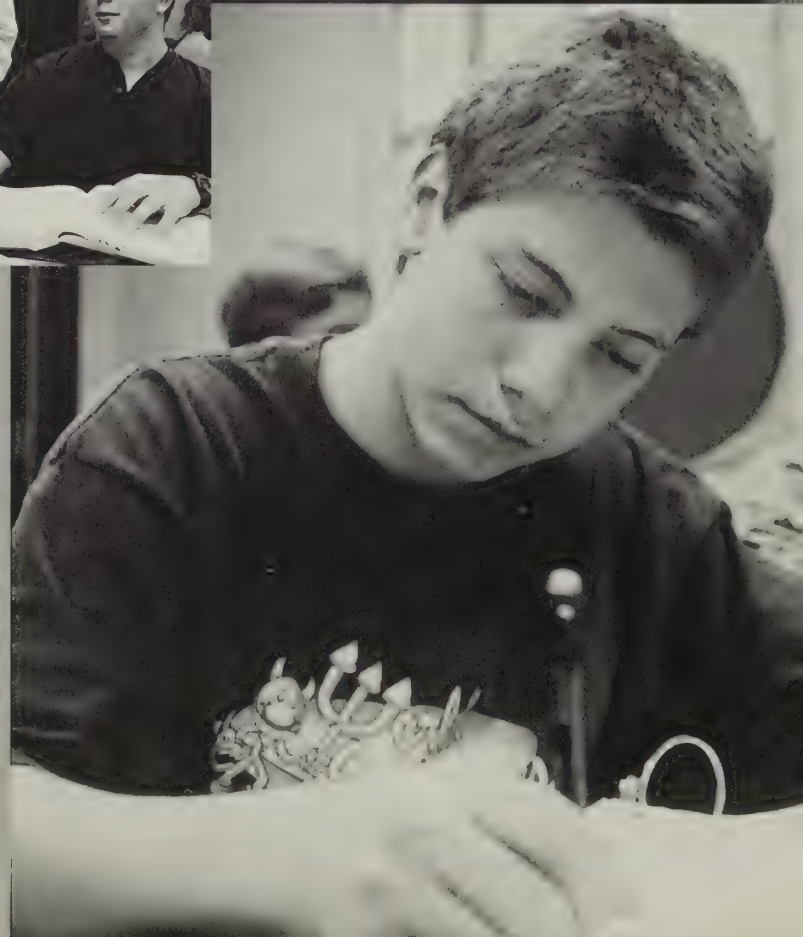

As to work habits, Ashley Belyea said, "You always have to do your homework in Mrs. Lynne's class, or you're totally lost for the next few days!" Also on the topic of homework, another student got philosophical. Brittany Lee proclaimed, "That which does not kill us makes us stronger," in agreement with, in her words: "some really smart person."

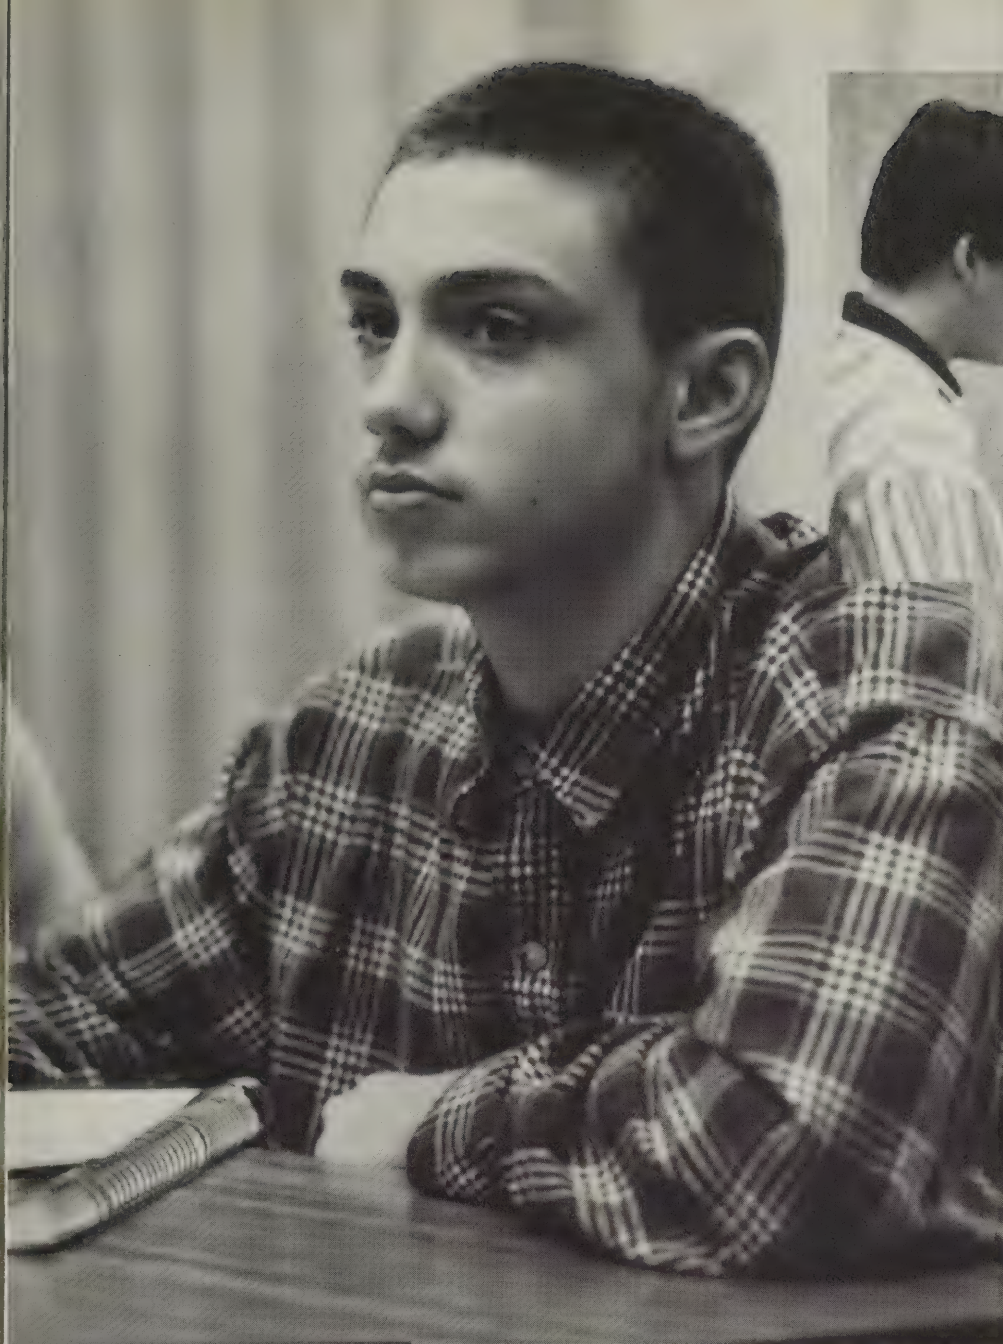

Ms. Stafford, who was in her first year of teaching tenth grade honors English, really stunned some of her students, especially Bert Jacoby, when she said, "...Now I don't want to sound like a teacher or anything, but..." This having to do with her students "getting a good night's sleep," and a "good breakfast" before their PSATs. Her teaching style was also one step up from the traditional "learn from books" philosophy. Ms. Stafford didn't just tell her students what the book said a story meant, she gave her own opinions. Derek Salerno, a student of Ms. Stafford's class, wrote me this comment: "Mi nam is Dewick. Ime in onners inglesh." Obviously, he enjoyed the discussions about literature more than the spelling area of her quizzes.

Even if English wasn't your favorite place to be, at least it can be said that you learned something about writing there. Save that terrible three page research report you wrote your freshman year. It might just be what gets you into the college of your choice. Or you could just save it and remember what a big pain it was to write, and thank heaven that it's all over! Story by Kathy Gardner.

Who'd Write a Story about This Anyway? Hunter Willis discusses the meaning of a piece of literature with his teacher, Ms. Schaller. Interpretation was key in understanding the story one was reading in English class. Photo by Meaghan Wilson.

History

The History department attempts to make learning about the past a blast...

Some students love history, some students don't particularly notice it. At Stafford, it is fair to say there is an even mix of both. Kate Godfrey, who takes AP History, exclaimed, "I love learning about the past!" No matter what the attitude, the teachers in the History department take on an almost impossible task everyday in trying to make learning about the past fun and interesting for the students. Lesley Wall commented, "During first period, no one in our class does anything or participates because we all are so tired!" Lisa Marietta said, "Mr. Powell makes history a lot of fun!"

Mr. Powell, who teaches AP History, along with the other teachers succeed in making their courses "really challenging, but at the same time extremely interesting and fun" in the words of Augusta Kuchinski. Overall, the history teachers do accomplish their goal in allowing the students to acquire a notable sum of knowledge about the past, in an equal combination with a lot of fun. Story by Stephanie Heffernan.

Math

How much harder can it be?

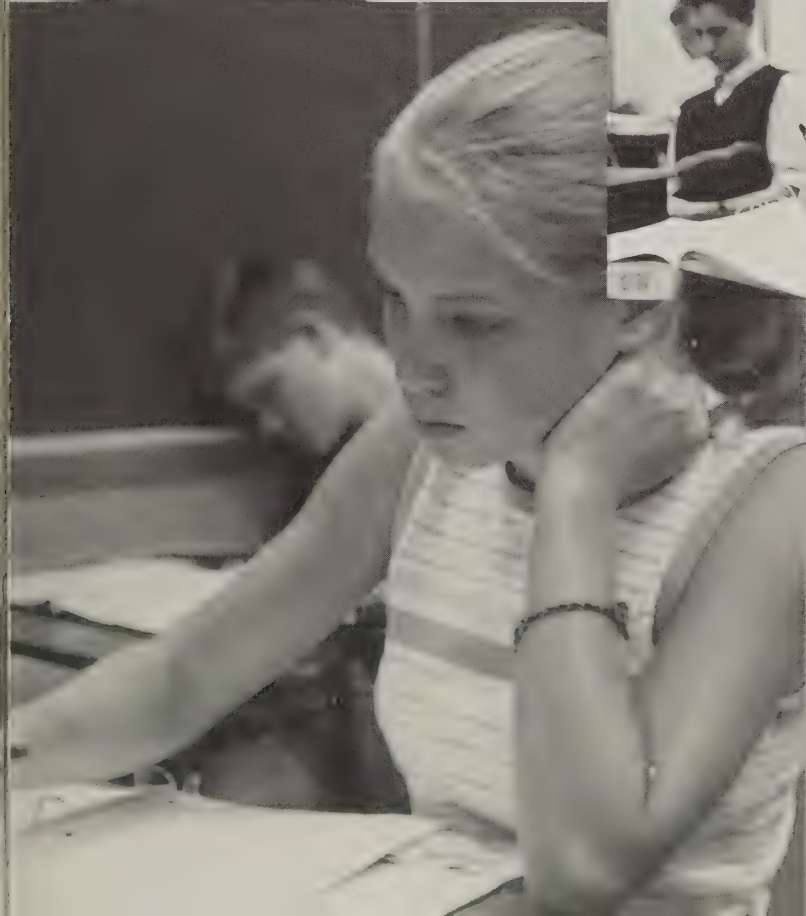

The year started out rough due to renovations, and schedule changes became a one of the main priorities. Some people took a liking of the higher math levels and some wanted to get out as soon as possible. "After the first week, I knew I needed to get out because I was totally clueless to what was going on," said Katie Cater, referring to Math Analysis with Trigonometry, before switching into Algebra 3.

Since S.O.L. testing, otherwise known as Standards of Learning testing, arrived last year, teachers had to cover their material quicker. "This year we're more conscience of the S.O.L. testing," said Ms. Baughan, who taught Advanced Geometry, Algebra 1 part 2, and Algebra 2 this year. The S.O.L.s tested students on the knowledge that teachers had to cover throughout the year, and every student between 9th and 12th grade had to take it.

There were new additions to the staff of the math department this year and there was a little adjustment that everyone had to get used to. Whether students think that math is hard or just a little too easy, it will always be required for at least three of the four years that they are at Stafford. But students will always remember their favorite teachers who taught them. "Coach Russ will always be coolest!", said Jennifer Brindle. Story by Laurie Mathias.

Science

Students take on Learning Experiments

There was a certain buzz around the Science department this year. What was the cause of this? Experiments, field trips, and the ever present labs played a large role. Of course there was the daily routine of taking notes to handle, but the allure of experiments kept the students working. "Biology is slightly difficult, but I'm excited we get to dissect frogs this year," a wide-eyed Ariel Zwerg exclaimed.

Labs are a necessity in Chemistry, too. "We made gak and ice cream. It was awesome," said Diana Price. There was also A.P. Chemistry, which was two periods long. This class was provided for the students who loved Chemistry.

Who could forget Marine Biology? This class boasted a boating trip and an aquarium filled classroom. Mike Duremus said, "Marine Biology is the best Science class this school has to offer." Although they didn't have aquariums, Physics students got to participate in an egg drop and a bridge building contest. As Ashleigh Covington put it, "Science is hard this year, but I know I can get through it."

Band

Unity from the Soul

Band classes were not any regular class. The students thought of themselves as simply one big musical family. Jennell Rodriguez said being in the band "brings us closer together." Laura Gardner agreed when she said, "There's a lot of love". Band students cooperated with each other while learning keys, timing, and scales.

Some students enrolled in band for specific reasons. Chris Ellington, who played the trumpet, said he takes band because "It is an easy A". Stafford Band had always been known for their extreme talent.

Students of the jazz class went to Drew this year to play for the middle school students. The class consisted of 20 students who played funk music. Steve Dodd took this class because he said, "I like playing the guitar and the class is fun." Besides jazz class, students who loved music took woodwind, symphonic, and concert band.

The love of music, instruments, and friendships were also solid outside of school. Tiffany Gross, who plays the flute said, "Band is awesome! We're all one big family because we all hang out together and get along." Sugar Beasley added, "I like the friendly people in band, they seem to stick to you."

Orchestra & Chorus

A Song in the Air

Stafford's orchestra and choral groups fill the halls of SHS with music. These talented groups are filled with exceptional musicians, singers, as well as dancers. Though sometimes behind the scenes, the orchestra and chorus play a huge role in the winter program at Stafford, creating the spirit of winter through their music and dance. Their role does not end there, however. "The winter program isn't our biggest thing, we compete in various competitions throughout the year as well," said Lexi Keeton.

Orchestra and chorus students enjoy the break from the regular school day, getting to play music or sing, rather than doing normal written work. "It's fun getting to sing and dance rather than just sit and do work," commented Amanda Smith. Surima Whitfield said, "I enjoy just getting to escape the school day and play music for a change." Jenni Carruba was in chorus all four years at Stafford. "When I get out of here I'd like to come back and take Mrs. Thompson's job!" laughed Jenni.

For students who are musically inclined, the orchestra and choral programs provide great opportunity. "I love to sing and want to continue after high school," said Jennifer Swansburg. The classes give students the chance to explore and expand their own abilities. Who knows? Stafford may have a famous musician or singer right under its roof! Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz.

Broadcasting, Newspaper & Yearbook

They make the memories...
literally!!

Throughout the year, none of us could wait to get our hands on the yearbook, the video yearbook, or the next issue of THE SMOKE SIGNAL. But did any of us realize how many countless hours the yearbook staff, the video production staff, or the journalism students had put in to make these novelties so special?

Not only did these students make the end of the year must-haves, they also did various things throughout the year. "We made the announcements on the computers," said Kristen Cox of Video Production, "We put announcements on one TV channel that ran all day long." James Tweedle said, "I learned a lot about video equipment, types of shots, and a bunch of other stuff." The Photojournalism students, "...had deadlines every week, we had to develop our own film and everything," said Kevin Louder. "It's pretty cool though, I mean to be able to put together your own yearbook exactly the way you want. It is just awesome!" said Heather Demko. "Journalism is the best class in the world, Mr. Driver is THE MAN!!!" said Melissa Love. "Yeah, it's really cool, we get to write articles for the paper and put it together the way we want to," commented Krista Eck. Her sister, Whitney Eck, who played a major part in the newspaper said, "we get to put our own thoughts and opinions in the paper, it's really awesome!" A big thank you goes out to all you students who participate in these classes. You guys did a great job! Story Ashley Dameron.

Business

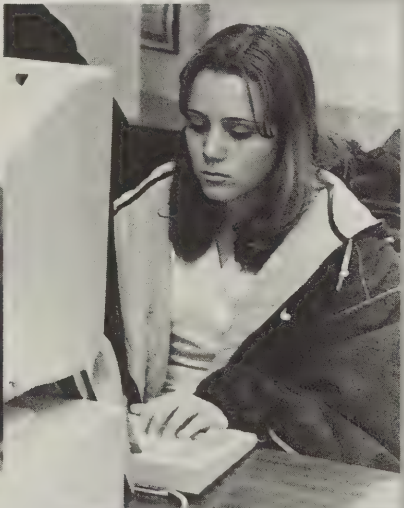

The Wave of the Future

Many students chose to take an elective class this year in the Business Department. These classes range from CIS (computer information systems) to keyboarding to business law. This sounds like a different variety of courses and it is, but they all have one thing in common. They are all designed to prepare students for business fields and for their future employment. One of the business teachers, Mrs. Dixon said, "Whether you go from school to work or from school to college, all students should leave high school with some knowledge and experience in using computers. After all, computers are our future."

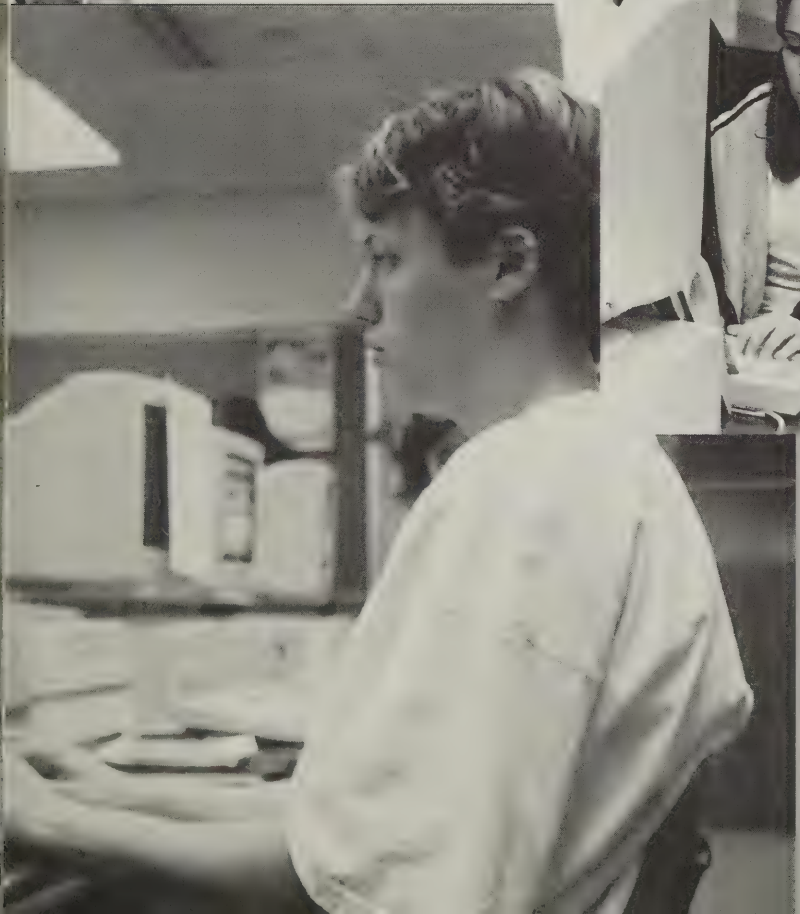

There was a different variety of computer courses this year that many students realized they might need for college, like accounting or speed writing.

Many students had mixed feelings about their business classes. Some students took it as an opportunity to bring up their GPA. Most students enjoyed their classes like Amber Sullivan. She said "It's fun!" For other students like Johnny Cabaniss it might have kept them off the honor roll. "I have almost all A's except in my keyboarding class where I probably have a 'C'.", said Johnny.

Whether students took a computer class or speed writing, they got some sense of skills in the business field. These classes were definitely a jump to the future! Story by Bobbi Decatur.

Vocational & Technology

Getting the Job Done

Have you ever wondered how an architect put your house together, or how your hairstylist knows what kind of hair cut looks best on your face?

Well, these are just a few of the questions that can be answered in the vocational and technology wing of our school.

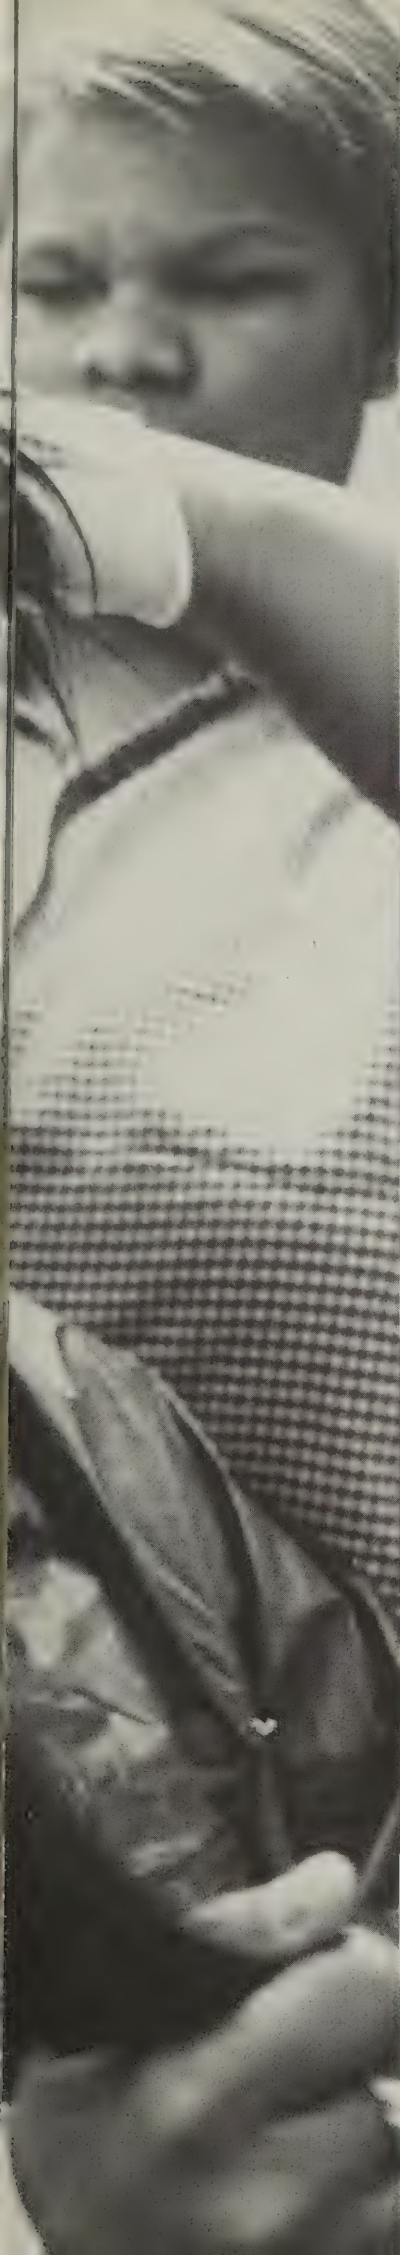

Josh Bailey said, "The vocational wing is the only place where you can physically apply what you're learning." Most vocational classes deal with hands-on work. Students in these classes can basically do anything from fix someone's hair in a french twist, to build a car from the barest of materials. "If it wasn't for the experience I gained in vocational classes, I wouldn't have the job that I do today," said Matt Slaydin.

The classes that some of these vocational and technology students take will help them later on in their career goals. Richy Dickinson said, "I'm going to be an architect when I get older, so I can use drafting then." Rebecca Quesenberry also learned helpful information to ease her into a career. She said, "Cosmetology is not just about hair, you also learn professionalism."

When it comes to working, kids in vocational classes know what it's all about. When they get out of high school, they're the ones who head straight for the job field or they are hauling themselves off to college to learn more about their trade of choice. Whatever the case, these students come away knowing how to function and work in the real world! Story by Kathy Gardner.

Art & Drama

Coming soon to a museum or theater near you...

Art and drama took shape this year as ultimate forms of expression for all students that took these popular, as well as challenging, electives. The artistically gifted students involved, found out that these classes aren't simply "easy A's." A lot of persistence, patience, and hard work goes into every performance and masterpiece. Katie Carter embellished when she said, "I love drama because I get to express my inner self. People don't understand how much time and effort is put into it."

Despite all of the hard work, the students knew the hours of time put into their works paid off when they received that satisfying feeling they got when viewing their finished product.

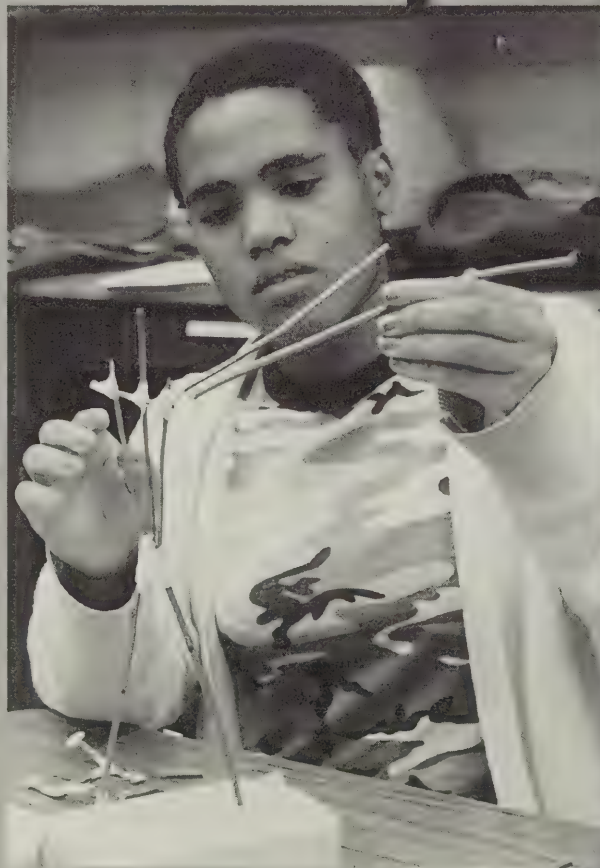

Having awesome teachers helped, too. The art and drama teachers made the student's efforts well worth their time. They were dedicated to molding their students into the future artists, actors, and actresses of America. Chris Hillary said, "I love art and having Mrs. Sigler as my teacher makes it even cooler."

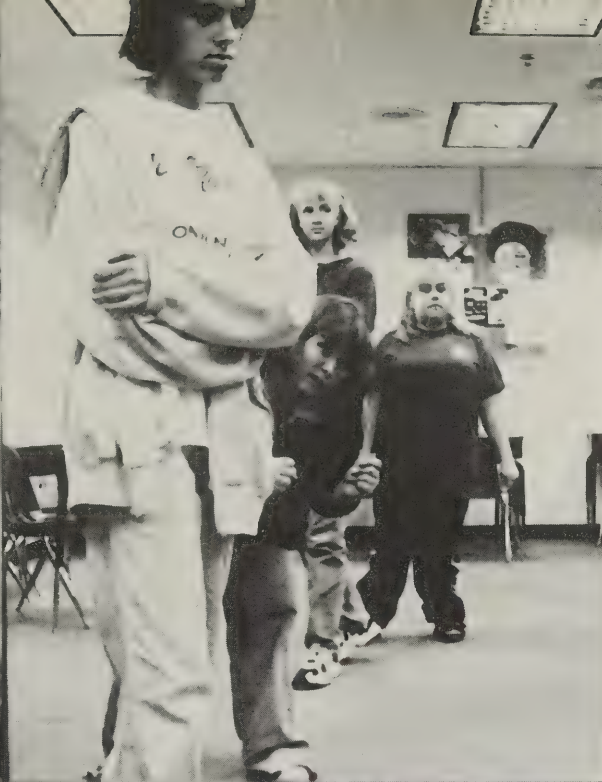

"Since I want to be an actress, I consider drama much more than just a regular class; it's something to prepare me for the future," said Vikki Steele. All of Stafford will be looking on into the future, hoping to see fellow Stafford alumni hitting it big, whether it be in the Metropolitan Museum of Art or on Broadway.

Foreign Language

Hola! Guten tag! Bonjour!
Salve!

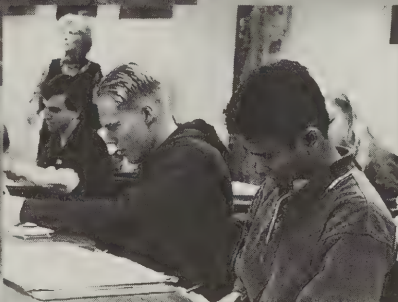

Stafford's population in foreign language classes grow each year. "The numbers get bigger and bigger every year," said Mrs. McClung, a Spanish 2 and 3 teacher. With the population growing, the number of teachers and classrooms had to increase. Stafford added three new teachers for the foreign language department as well as three new classrooms.

The curriculum for taking a foreign language is either taking one language for 3 years, or two languages for 2 years each. The students could have taken more classes if they preferred. "I'm taking Spanish because it'll look good when I apply for colleges," said Kyle Boutchyard; however, some students enjoyed taking the classes because they have an interest in learning the language and certain things about its culture. "When I go to Spain when I grow up, I want to be able to order the foods that I want in the restaurants, and what type of foods to expect," said Keia Wilson. Ghia Bailey said, "It's and interesting language, and I also think that the Latin people are very interesting."

When having to learn a different language, it may come easier to some and harder for others. Students liked when the teachers did activities that helped them learn the language in a way that they could understand. "I enjoy watching the videos. They help me get the vocabulary," said Matt Catalano. Students also enjoy the foreign language teachers. Brian Kerstetter said, "Ms. Faggart is my favorite teacher. She makes learning a language fun."

Whether they took German, Latin, Spanish, Japanese, French, or even sign language, students were able to get an understanding of other cultures and their history. And with the new technologies like videos, students were able to be taught in a way that is exciting for them.

The Daily Burn

The importance of P.E.

"The Track is so far away," complained an already exhausted Virginia King. Many students seemed to agree with her. Although P.E. may not have been among the favorite classes for ninth and tenth graders, it was a welcome change after sitting at desk all day. It was time to get outside and breathe some fresh air, while becoming physically fit. Getting ready to run the mile, Ashley Dameron quickly added, "P.E. is a fun class and an easy A." The students' opinion of the teachers were pretty high this year, too. As Maria Hingle and Heather Groff put it, "Coach Portner's pretty slick!"

Even though there were mixed reviews about P.E., every sophomore was looking forward to Driver's Ed and Behind the Wheel. It was a right of passage along with a great privilege for the lucky students who got through the class this year. The only thing to worry about now is getting a parking permit next year.

So keep in mind the inspiring words of Carson Tyson, "I don't know much, but I know P.E. is fun." It may not be proper English, but the point is still clear.

Facing the Challenge

"Go, Fight, Win Tonight!" The cheerleaders cheer as the football and basketball teams play their hardest. Sports are an integral part of some students' lives. As Jessica Moore said, "Playing sports not only keeps you in shape, but you can have a lot of fun at the same time."

Each athlete understood the importance of dedication and perseverance; success could not be achieved without these two elements. Scott Ferree commented on his first year as an athlete, "Wrestling has done a lot of good things for me, in a way, it has made me a stronger person." But others had a different view on the matter, such as Kari Fredette who said, "Playing sports makes me so tired. I never knew the value of sleep until I played sports here."

Many students agreed that the girls' teams generally did very well all-around. "Our girls' teams could beat any school's girls teams," said Oliver Goldman. But he also agreed with a lot of others that, "Sports events were fun to attend, it didn't matter if the team won."

And of course, along with the sports teams came the fans. They were the ones cheering the players on, painting up, and having faith in the team. They were the ones who filled the stands with blue and gold and they were the ones who made all of the hard work bearable. Brett Lively concluded that, "We may not always win, but seeing all of the students cheering us on from the bleachers made the effort worthwhile." Story by Nicole Brors.

Touchdown TIME

*With the home field under construction,
the tribe was on the road*

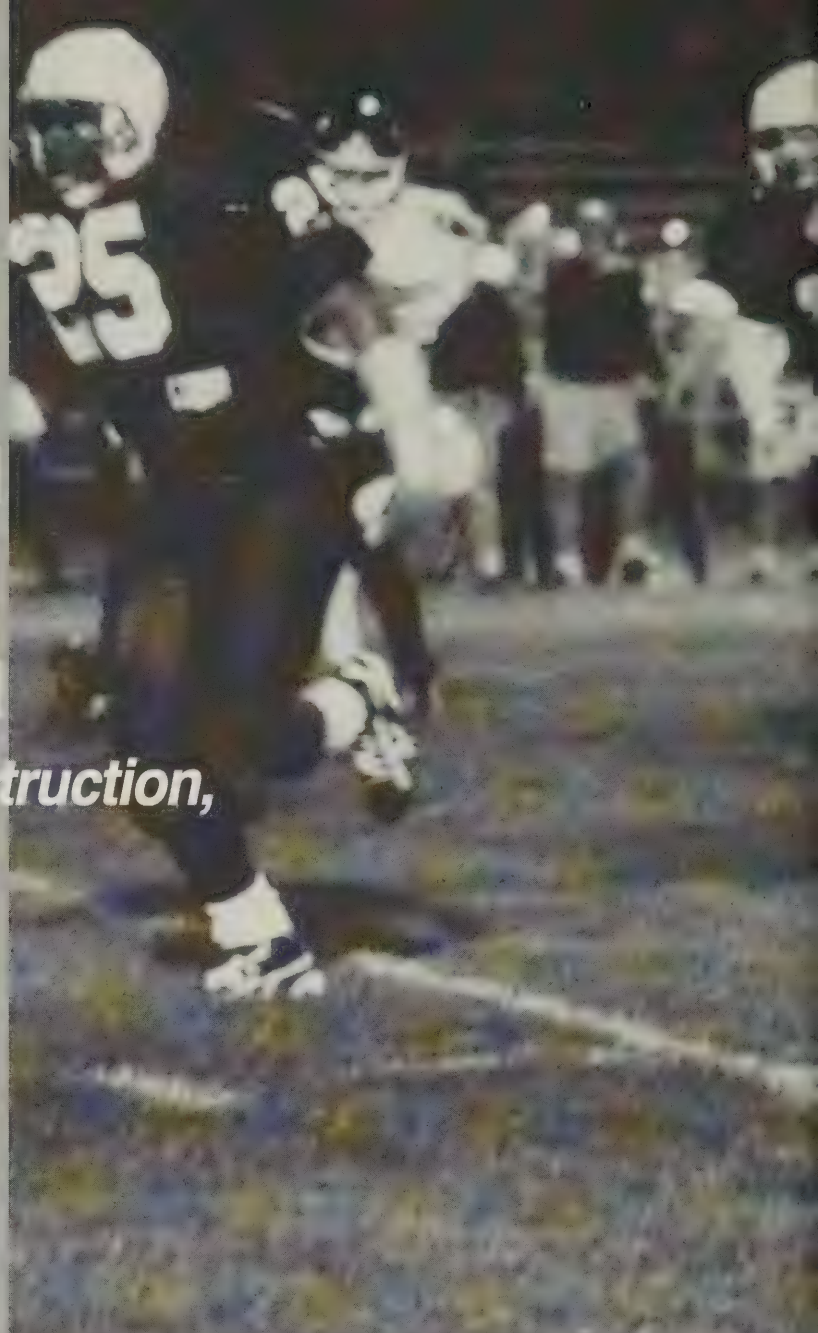

The Indians could not have asked for a more ideal situation... new coach, new field, new players. Things started off smooth from the beginning! Well... not really, but the Indians pulled things together to open at Osbourn Park victoriously. "Beating O.P. got us up and gave us confidence, but we still had a lot of work to do to be ready for the next games," said Josh Chamberlin, a senior on the team. The Indians traveled away every game with the exception of Homecoming, playing their "home" games at either Brooke Point or North Stafford. "Since this is my last year, I really wanted to play at home," Kenton Conlee said of his senior year on the team. It was a highlight, as well as a surprise, to play Homecoming at Stafford on the home turf. "I think people appreciated playin' at home, since it was pretty much unexpected," commented Travis Foss.

The season had its ups and downs but as Dural Dawson, one of the key players on the team put it, "You just gotta go with what you got. If you can't play at home, you play somewhere else; just so long as you play." The Indians worked all summer with Coach Pierce getting used to new coaching and new teammates. The team included returning seniors as well as many underclassmen who all had to learn to work together and aim towards victory. Home or away, the Indians gave it their all to lead the tribe to success. Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz.

Hard Work & Commitment

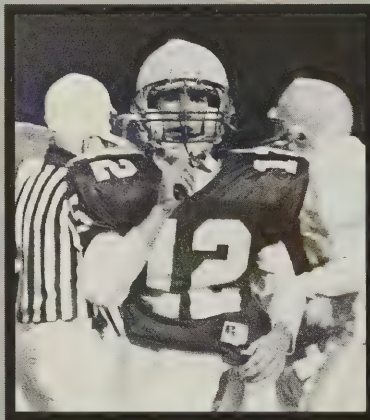

J.V. and Freshman football give their all

The J.V. and freshman football players worked extremely hard this year. Coach Neatrour, coach of J.V. along with Coach Hillary, said, "Our record was four and five and half of our players were ninth graders! Everyone played well despite their record. There will definitely be some strong improvements ahead in Stafford football."

Lance Griffin agreed with Coach Neatrour but was afraid of the students whom will have to transfer to the new high school next year. He said, "I'm going to miss a lot of guys; we will be losing a lot of good players." But the team is determined not to lose their Indian pride.

"I like Coach Neatrour's raging fits," said Reggie Gentry. "He encouraged us to play hard and succeed." The J.V. team displayed hard work, dedication, and determination, which the freshman followed. The freshman team also worked hard. Being new to high school football, the team listened to Coach Russ and Coach Pierce. Matt Conley summed up the year by saying, "It was hard work, but a lot of fun and excitement!" Story by

Marching Band

Drums, trumpets, french horns, flags, batons, and a football field...

The official blew the whistle for half time, the marching band and flags jumped to their feet and in perfect formation and rushed out on the field. They played "Cowboys, Dinah, Buffalo/Hot-time, and Way Out West," reported Josh Early, "with a lot of energy." Why would anybody, let alone a whole band, practice for endless hours during the summer and after school to have only a few short moments in the spotlight? "It's so much fun, you get to be with your friends, doing what you love," explained Surima Whitfield. "Toronto, Canada makes it all worth it! Every year in May we go up there, and play in a parade or a competition," said Sara Wood. "The competitions are the most fun. We do the Christmas Parade and the Appleblossom Parade every year," says

Stephanie Nesmith, the Drum Major for the band. The year went smoothly, with only a few minuscule setbacks. "We had a lot of freshmen this year and not as many seniors, so we had to teach the new people a lot of stuff," said Johan Ohman. "One week it would be freezing and then, the next it would be burning hot," complained Allison Spach. Field Hockey

the Winning Tradition

This year, the girls field hockey team won the district title for the second year in a row, conquered the regional title and went to the quarter-finals of the state competition. The season began with a long summer tryout. This would determine who would be part of the field hockey tradition. The team had a new coach and many new upcoming J.V. players joining the team. Many people believed that the loss of some key seniors and last year's coach, Mrs. Pat Wheelbarger would hold these girls back from competing at a high level of a competition level. Well, guess again! The field hockey team ended its season with seventeen wins and only three losses. This tied the school record set from last year for the most wins in a season. "This year our team was awesome!" said Coach Robin Woodie, the new coach for the team. "We worked so hard to get to states again, and we made it a team goal to do so," said Betsy Decatur. The field hockey team has maintained a winning tradition for the last 8 years, winning districts half of the time and never getting less than second place. That is something to be proud of and the girls—Varsity and JV—showed their pride throughout the season as they reflected in their records. "I'm very proud and honored that I could be part of this team; we worked so hard and to go to states again. It was great!" said Stephanie Heffernan.

Cross Country

Setting out to win

You've barreled through two miles when suddenly someone cries out, "One mile to go!" This is an extreme sport because everyone knows, "There's no crying in cross country."

Despite cross country's demanding physical regimen, something about it drew its participants in. Peter Bennett said, quite simply, "After running, it's refreshing to have Powerade." Members of this sport were truly dedicated and also truly loved to run. Clearly, it was no surprise that every person who was spoken to about this sport mentioned the fact that they bonded with every member of the team. All of them share a common goal: to run better or faster with each day of training.

Ashley Dameron said, "As co-captain, I enjoyed my first season a lot. The girls were great and we became incredibly close. [Cross country] is definitely the closest-knit team out there." Maria Hingle agreed. She said, "It was really awesome because our team was so close."

The support within the team was also astounding. Heather Groff said, "Ashley Dameron is the bomb because she was number five in the region and made it to states." It was not uncommon to hear a C.C. team member cheering on a teammate or congratulating him or her—with genuine sincerity—on a race well run. Even before meets, they helped each other to get psyched up. At a "pasta party," every member of the team got together and chowed down a high carbohydrate meal. Besides giving them extra energy and helping them to focus on the next day's meet, this also allowed them to hang out with some of their closest friends.

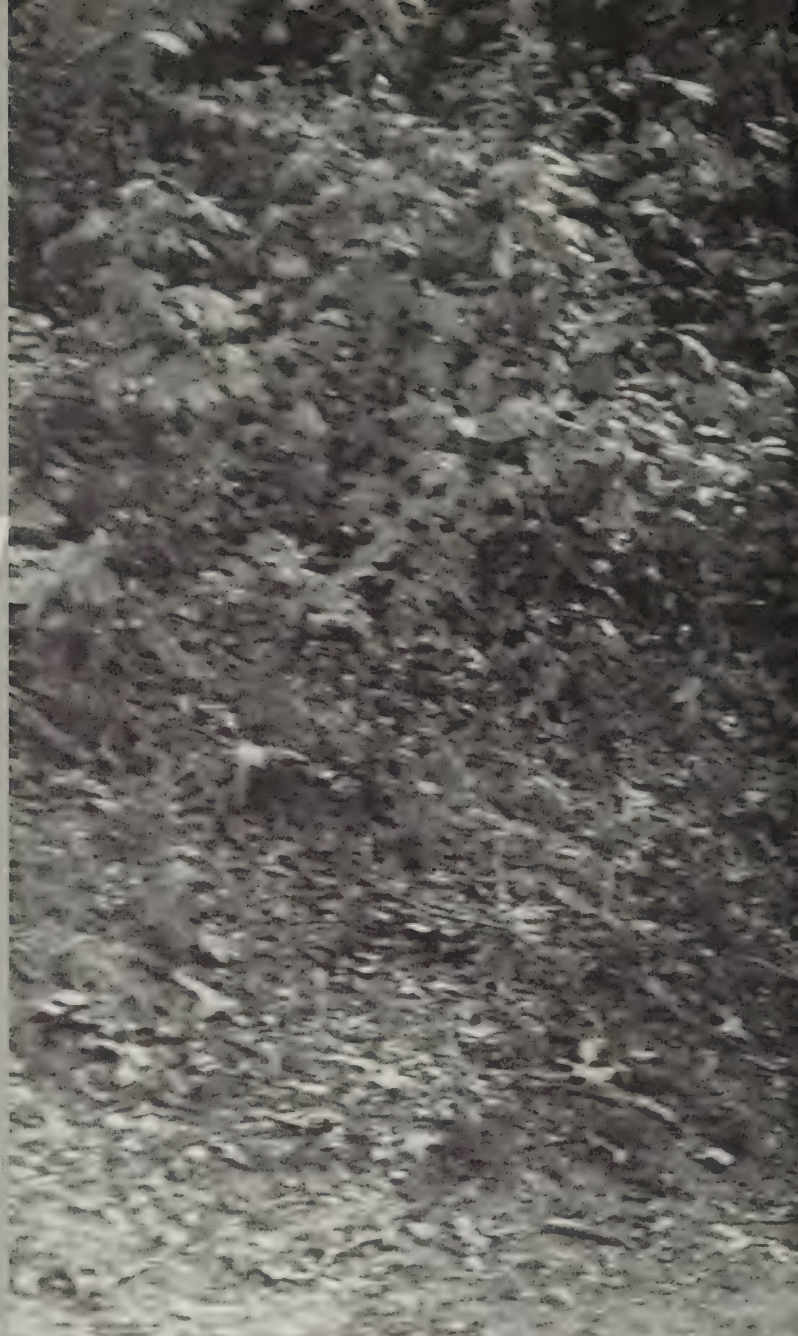

Cross country had its hard times too, but the good always overran the bad. Bert Jacoby said, "We had a tough season, with many of our best runners being injured, but I think in the end we all had fun."

Strength and endurance were no strangers to the cross-country runners. These athletes knew what it was to work hard. Additionally, it was wonderful to have such great team support. Looking back, these young men and women will know they were a member of a team that worked far more and "did it FAR longer" than most other people can even imagine. Even if they didn't win every meet, this team still truly went the distance, both in their athletic meets and in their team spirit.

Girls Tennis & Golf

Two winning seasons...

The golf and girls tennis teams both ended their fall seasons this year with incredible wins and lasting memories. Both teams went to districts, the tennis went team on to Regionals; however, both also lost many valuable friends, important athletes and motivators after their senior seasons ended.

The golf team, which had an excellent season, only lost two matches. They went on to districts with outstanding leadership from P.J. Cox, Ross Duvall (who both made the all-area golf team), and Jay Spitler. And, despite the sudden departure of long-time coach, Mr. Byrne, the golf team adjusted well to new coach, Mr. Beverly, who proved to be a great leader. Sophomore player Shaun Austin commented, "I know we were all sad to see Mr. Byrne go, but Mr. Beverly was really cool and helped us maintain a great record."

The tennis team also maintained its wonderful record as they went to districts and then on to regionals. Senior stand-out Lulu Rodriguez boosted the team's winning spirit by winning the regional title in her division. Kate Godfrey said, "Playing tennis is really great because we are such a close team. It's like a big family, and I'm really gonna miss all of the seniors."

The senior girls tennis players definitely led the team this year as they engulfed the top six spots (with the exception of sophomore Krista Eck). "[The seniors] will all truly be missed, but fortunately our team has many promising returning players," commented Coach Vanderberg the night of the Fall Sports Awards Banquet.

Both the golf and tennis teams maintained successful seasons with hard work, LOTS of practice and true friendships. Junior tennis player Meaghan Wilson summed up the feeling when she said, "This was my first year playing, and I'm definitely playing next year! Nothing is better than being part of the tennis team!" Story by Stephanie Heffernan.

Team Play

There were tough times for the basketball team, but they made the best of their season.

The Varsity Boys Basketball team put a lot of time and energy into their play, and for the most part, were satisfied with their season. Brett Lively said, "It's been a great season. We've had our ups and downs, but in the end, all the hard work we did in practice paid off." Rudolph Kelly also said, "Our season was good. We all had fun, but we lost a few really close games we should've won."

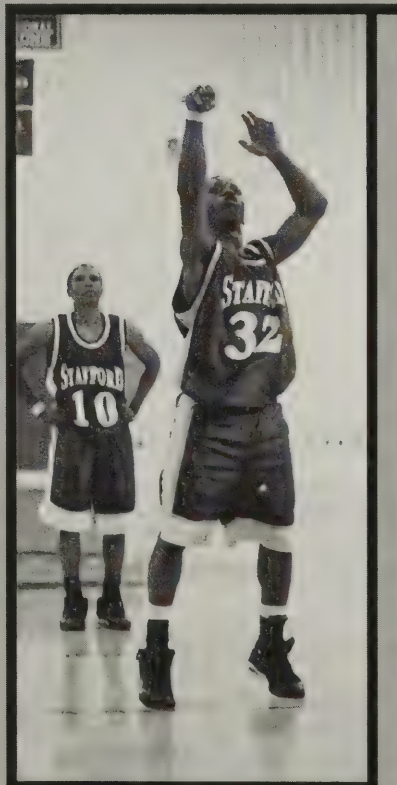

All the hardships changed during the later part of the season, and the team really started to grow to their full potential. Hugh Parker said, "We came on strong toward the end, and really learned to play together."

M.J. Moyers looked enthusiastically to the future. M.J. said, "We had a great season, and I hope we have a good one next year." Rashard Johnson looked to the future as well, but not only to the team's. Rashard said, "It was a lot of fun playing alongside the seniors this season. I wish them all the best of luck for next year."

The season was a tough one, but the Varsity Boy's team definitely put forth their greatest efforts. The entire team should be proud of the accomplishments they made on the court. Each one should also remember the fact that they even had the guts to compete in such a physically and mentally demanding sport... and succeed. Story by Kathy Gardner.

TWO Points

J.V. and Freshman Basketball

The Freshman and JV Boys Basketball teams had outstanding seasons this year. The freshmen proved to be ready for big-league high school life and competition this year, as high spirit reigned on and off the court. Freshman Brad Hayes stood out this year as a key asset to the team, he said, "I love the game and just hope to win!" With keys wins at some of the area's top high schools, these underclassmen proved they were worthy of some high praise.

The JV Boys also had a great season and had their record to back it up. With key plays made by outstanding Juniors, Sophomores and Freshmen, the JV Boys turned out an end of the year record of many wins and close losses. Junior Kyle Grybz said, "We had a good season overall, and we just hope we made the rest of Stafford proud."

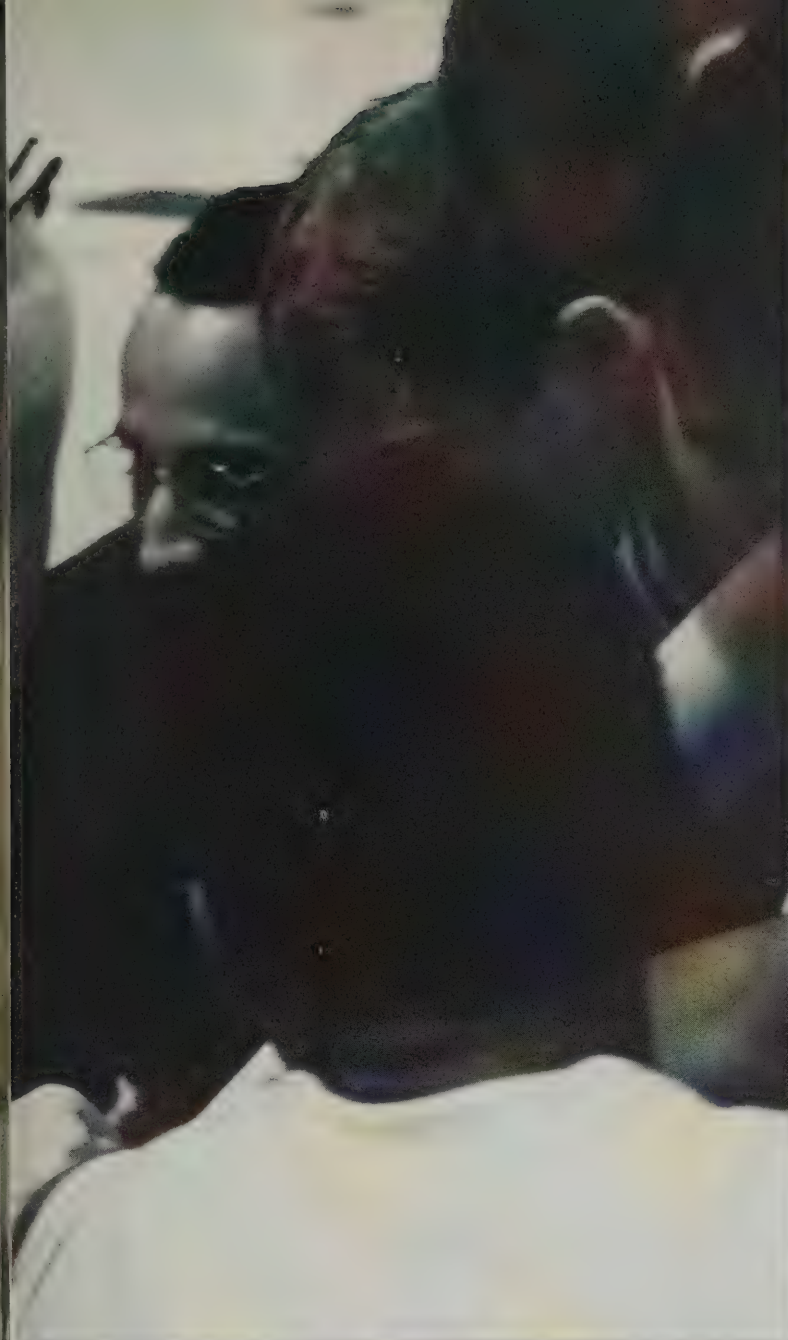

Sophomore Ian Campbell said, "We really had a great season. We got along and had some incredible wins." Once again, high team spirit and teamwork proved a key factor behind the success of the team. Story by Stephanie Heffernan

Playing to Win

Losers quit when their tired...
Winners quit when they've won

With high hopes and expectations, the girls basketball team started their year wanting to achieve last year's accomplishments as District Champions. With the girls' determination and hard work ethics, they were close to achieving their goal. Senior captain, Kari Fredette said, "I respect all of the girls on my team. every one of them put their hearts in to it, and really worked hard."

The Lady Indians finished their season strong after a long season of everyday practices. Stafford went 4-6 in the district, and 7-3 out of the district. "We were like a family. Everybody started to recognize their specific role on the team, and we started to gel and finish with some wins," said junior Meaghan Wilson.

Finishing the year proud of their accomplishments, the Lady Indians enjoyed getting closer to their teammates, and having a little fun. Senior, Karen Sowala said, "I'm glad that our team really pulled through. Everyone felt like family, and that's what our team was all about." Story by Laurie Mathias.

Take it to the Hoop

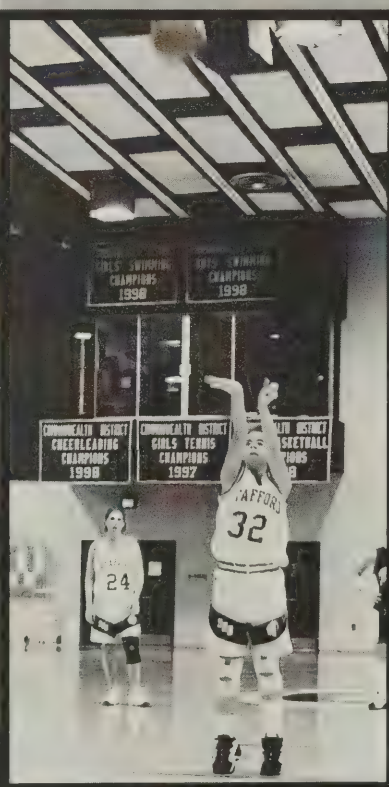

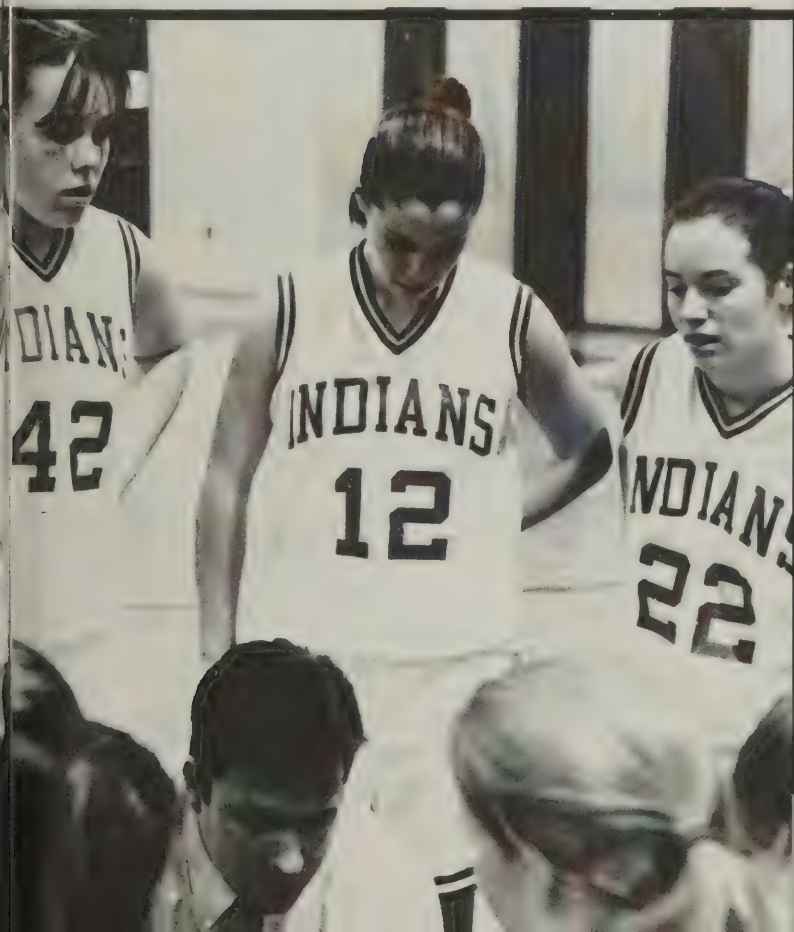

Practice makes perfect.

Both the Junior Varsity and Freshmen Girls Basketball teams practiced every day to improve their game. The dedicated girls of the basketball team came to the gym everyday after school. While there, they practiced lay ups, running drills, and foul shots. "Our practices have helped to make the girls' J.V. team really strong this year," said Veronica Pugh.

The J.V. team did very well this season. The girls' were almost undefeated, losing just one game. All their other games were won by a margin of twenty points or more, putting them high in the ranks. "We're doing really great. All the girls are working together," exclaimed Megan Vrabel. The freshmen team did well, too. Although they did not have the same record as the J.V. team, they learned a lot about the game and good sportsmanship.

Every single girl on the team became better players, better people, and better friends. Through practicing and playing together, they all formed bonds that could never be broken. "I love these girls!" commented Meaghan Wilson. Story by Bri Bevan.

Something to Cheer About

the spirit pumped up*

We've all seen them, at football games and basketball games, jumpin' and yellin' for all they're worth. What's the whole story on those ponytail clad girls and muscle bound stuntmen? These were your Stafford High varsity cheerleaders and there was more to their job than many think. "We have a lot of responsibilities most people don't realize," said Coach Janet Bagget. "We're relied on to plan out the pep rallies, the bonfire before Homecoming, and make sure the halls are decorated before a big game," added senior Genny Rankin. "We've been at the school 'til eight or nine o'clock putting up decorations that usually get torn down the next day," stated Jennie Tuscany. Their roll at Stafford doesn't stop at the decorating and planning though, cheerleaders began practicing their sport in the summer and finished their "season" after competition, usually around mid-March.

As the returning District champs, the cheerleaders had a lot of work to do as the season unfolded. "Everyone expects a lot of you when you move up to varsity, especially since Stafford was first in districts last year," said Jenny Garrison, a junior on the squad. "You have to want to be the best and that's what we always tried to aim for," said Lindsey Diebold. The cheerleaders went into the year full of enthusiasm, wowing people with their jumps, cheers and tumbling. The season was another great success, giving Stafford plenty to cheer about! Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz.

We've got the Power

Cheerleaders believe in victory.

Freshman and Sophomore cheerleaders showed their school spirit cheering for the boys and girls J.V. and Freshman sports teams. Football began the season with a bang as the Junior Varsity squad worked their best to pump up the crowd. "A lot more people came to J.V. games than last year's freshman games. It was a lot more exciting being able to cheer in front of a lot of people," said Courtney Johnston. With new coach Mrs. Franzke, the J.V. team practiced Taibo in order to pump up their adrenaline. The girls were well prepared to excite their crowd at games. Allison Rankin said, "Practices became a lot harder when we began Taibo, but we gained strength and energy that kept us pumped throughout basketball games."

The Freshman cheerleaders were not shy to express their qualities. Under the coaching of Mrs. Baumgartner, the freshman strutted their school spirit on blue and gold Fridays. "I love blue and gold Fridays! It was a great way to show our school spirit and be a little crazy," said Brit Smith. The squad expanded right before basketball season. Four new girls were added to the group which made the squad bigger and more powerful. "It was great making new friends when winter tryouts added some great talent to our squad," said Jenny Witten. The cheerleaders worked hard and enjoyed the new experience. The J.V. and Freshman squads practiced hard in order to work their way up to Varsity. "Practices were often long and strenuous, but they prepared us for Varsity expectations," said Heather Akin. As tryouts for Varsity came around at the end of the school year, many J.V. cheerleaders advanced to a higher level. Stafford cheerleaders are known for their voice, spirit, and sharp motions. The J.V. and Freshman cheerleaders kept this tradition alive. Story by Amber Leigh Carpenter.

Dancing Feet

Girls take charge of halftime

Who were those girls strutting their stuff at every basketball and football game? The Stafford Indiannettes, that's who. The girls worked hard after school to perfect choreography for the next show. It payed off because many fans enjoyed their performances. "Wow, [the Indiannettes] have gotten really good," commented Erica Vos.

The Varsity drill team performed at all varsity halftimes and they also made a cameo appearance with N'SYNC at the pep rally. These talented girls even taught senior guys how to shake their stuff for the annual powder puff football game. There was nothing these girls could not do under the watchful eye of their captain, Jennifer Rollins. But the girls were more than just teammates, they were friends. "I love these girls," said Jennifer Rollins.

The J.V. team, although some members were new additions to the team, also had a successful year. The dancers put on shows for J.V. games, and also competed in contests. The team got first-runner up in district competitions. "My favorite moment on the team was dancing for the workers at Pizza Hut," said Ashley Pollpeter.

To the dedicated dancers of the drill team, dancing is not just an extracurricular activity, it's a way of life. "There's nothing I'd rather do than dance," exclaimed Amber Sullivan. Story by Bri Bevan.

You don't Say? Listening carefully to Kristie Boyd, Megan Stutzman and Alison Blake discuss their next dance routine. Planning dance steps and practicing till their feet ached was just part of how these girls prepared for pep rallies. They also honed their skills at every basketball and football game during the year.

Who got the Rhythm?

The Step Team knows how to light up a crowd!

If you look up the word 'rhythm' in the dictionary you will see this definition: the recurrence or repetition of stress, beat, accent and motion. All of which the Sisters of Rhythm have. This year, the Step Team performed at basketball games and other school events where they lit up the crowds with their steps and chants. The step team took the challenge of making up their own chants and steps with the help of their two coaches, Ms. Boose and Ms. Tyler. One of the seniors on the team, Balicia Rivers said, "This year our step team is very organized and disciplined. We make up our own chants, so that makes doing them very rewarding." The Step Team competed at other schools to show off their amazing stepping talents. Many students came to basketball games and Pep Rallies just to see the step team work their magic. The Sisters of Rhythm were definitely "Stepping to the beat" this year at Stafford High School! Story by Bobbi Decatur.

Wrestling Team

Changes in coaching bring on wonderful results for the wrestling team.

Your opponent used all his strength to try to bring you down and pin you. But you had strength of your own, and in a matter of seconds, you had pinned him. The referee raised your arm in consideration of your victory—you had just beaten one of the highest ranked wrestlers in the league...

This could have been a moment in the wrestling season for any one of the team members. Each one worked hard, and won many matches because of their hard work. D.J. Eagle said, "It's been a tough season, but we were all able to pull it off and come up with second at districts."

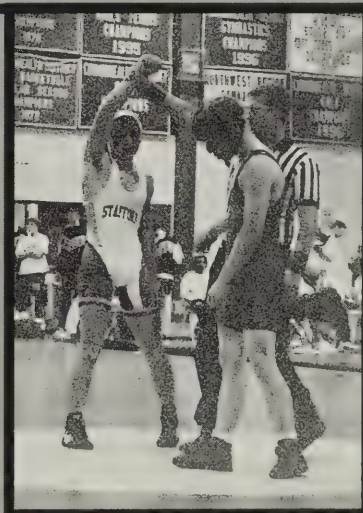

Some changes were made in the coaching area, which seemed to greatly benefit the teams performance. Danny Labar said, "I didn't wrestle much during the season due to a previous injury, but when I did, I felt the combination of the new and old coaching style was a real advantage." Shawn Posey agreed, and placed emphasis on a new face in the coaching and assistance scene. He said, "Mr. Hilleary brought us a lot of the help that our team really needed."

Chris Hilleary said of the team's improvements, "This year our district was one of the toughest in the region, but our team was probably one of the hardest to beat."

Aside from the fact that the team wrestled well, they also had a lot of fun and enjoyed the time spent working to improve their performance. Tom Stewart said, "Wrestling takes up a lot of time with practices and everything, but it was fun just hanging out with the guys." Also, said Robby Orange,

"Wrestling is the best sport to play, due to the great conditioning and the feeling you get when you win. The coaching staff helped us have a lot of fun, and taught us a lot of things that helped us to really perform well."

The wrestling team ended their season with a new confidence about the sport they played. The new coaching style helped their performance immensely, proving once again the age-old saying, "change is good." Story by Kathy Gardner.

The Swimming team speeds to new heights

The Indians reached new heights in swimming this year after an incredible season. Placing at least in the top five in many of the most prestigious meets. Both the girls and boys teams wound up with incredible second place finishing wins, winding up a great season. Both teams went on to place in regionals and then to send a select few of the top swimmers on to states. Sophomore swimmer Kevin Louder said, "It was such hard work, especially at the beginning, but it all paid off in the end, especially when we got to regionals."

Senior captain Kim Anderson, who proved to be not only a talented swimmer, but also leader and motivator said, "Swimming is my life, and I love it a lot, even though it can be very hard work sometimes. My senior year proved to be especially fun because of the fact that I was able to lead the team as Captain."

Junior Captain Kate Godfrey summed up her season as, "fun and challenging at the same time." The swim team proved to be one of Stafford's most successful sports teams this season not only due to the incredibly talented swimmers on the team, but also the leadership and friendship that existed between one of the most popular sports at Stafford High School. Story by Stephanie Heffernan

We are the Champions

The Gymnastics team finishes second in the state.

With an almost undefeated record this year, Stafford's gymnasts were left gleaming. "This year is incredible! We are so proud of ourselves for our accomplishments. Things just keep getting better and better," said sophomore Aimee Little. And things did get better and better. With the disappointment last year of losing the District title to Brooke Point, Stafford's gymnasts made it a goal to regain the title, and they did just that. Not only did the team become 1999's Commonwealth District Champions, but they were also honored as the Northwest Regional Champions for the fourth year in a row. "Our team really works well together, and I think it helps that we have good depth," said freshman Sarah Brown - who was a new addition to the team this year.

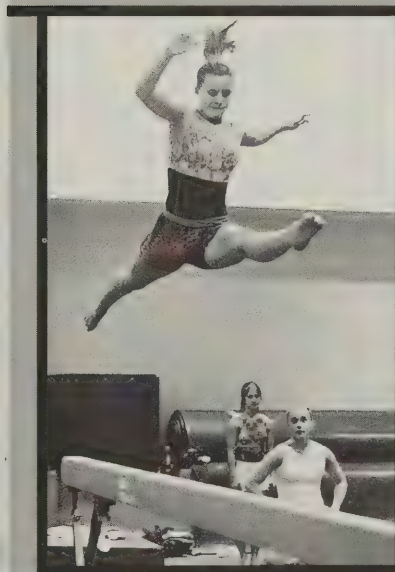

And with this "depth", these individuals had a tendency of breaking a few school records and becoming champions.

A perfect score of 10.0 is the best that a gymnast can receive when competing in an event, and this year our gymnasts came quite close to achieving perfection. Aimee Little set a new school record not once, but twice on the uneven bars, scoring a 9.9. Sarah Brown broke two school records this year - one on the vault, scoring a 9.75, and the other for all-around, with a total of 38.05.

With their first place finish at Regionals, Stafford was able to compete at the two-day AAA State division meet held at Ocean Lakes High School in Virginia Beach. There, they placed second in the state as a team.

Sophomore, Kristen Maddox added, "I'm really proud of the team. We really work hard in practices, and I'm glad that it's showing in competition." Senior Kristy Noel said, "It's my last year, so I'm happy that we did well. We were a strong team and we all did our best." Story by Laurie Mathias.

Athletic Trainers

A vital part of athletics.

Oh no! You just got tackled out on the field and your ankle hurts—really, really bad!! Your teammates pulled you off the field and over to the bench. As soon as you sat down, an athletic trainer comes to the rescue. She bandaged and taped your ankle, recommended ice, and a little R & R.

The athletic trainers not only took care of football injuries, but they took care of all the athletes—no matter what season. “We get all the water and ice ready, we watch the practices to prevent injuries, and when an injury occurs, we take care of it,” said Jessica Nimmo, better known as “Trainer Girl”. “We tape ankles, and recommend either ice or heat depending on the injury,” said Candi Harpine. Candi trained for three years while at Stafford. Each trainer trained for a specific sport each season. Through the course of the season, the trainers informed their athletes, coaches, and parents about the different injuries that could take place and how to take care of them.

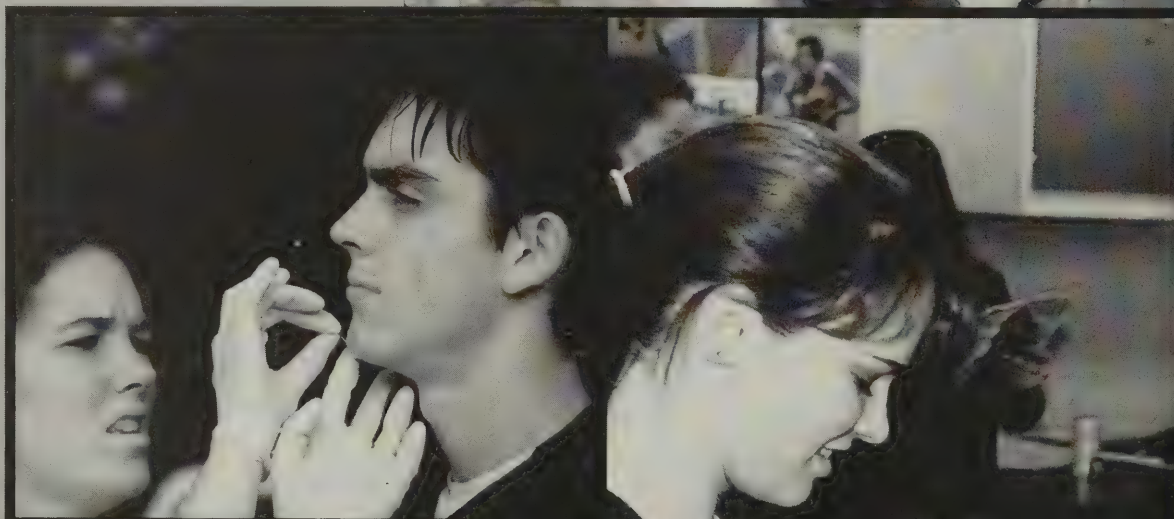

Being an athletic trainer had many benefits. “The best thing about being a trainer is you get to know all of the athletes and it’s really fun,” added Candi. Aimee Little commented, “Yeah, it’s really opened-doors, especially to all the different medical careers.” However, it also had some disadvantages. “You’re not really appreciated, I mean, every once in a while, you’ll get a thank you, if you’re lucky,” complained Kristin Maddox. “It’s also a lot of hours,” commented Maryanne Yednock. “We have to stay for all the home events and you have to travel with the football team,” said Mrs. Harding.

The trainers prevented and took care of many injuries and, “knock on wood, we didn’t have any life threatening cases!” boasted Mrs. Harding. Good job girls! Thank you for taking care of our athletes!

Go, Fight, Run

Winter and Spring Track Athletes Build Endurance

Tedious practices brought success for this year's track teams. Student athletes worked daily to improve their strength and endurance. "There is a lot of devotion involved with track," said Alden Hingle, who ran both winter and spring track. Alden was also the only male in our district to advance to state competition in the hurdle event with his ability to jump over five hurdles. The pole vault and various length running races were other events that track athletes excelled in during district and regional competition. "We worked really hard to prepare for these competitions. "Advancing to states and doing the best I can was really important to me all year," said Sam Hall.

Besides missing school for competition, pole vaulters had fun using bungee cords to condition with. The cord brought laughs and improved heights, which is what track members enjoyed. Stephanie Harris said, "Track made me feel good about being in shape and helped to relieve my stress. It was nice to run outside on a clear, spring day and get some fresh air." Both winter and spring track members excelled this year. The hard work and the many different drills enabled students to become stronger, more relaxed, and faster. Allison Rankin summed up the year by saying, "Track was a great sport to build self-esteem, while having fun". Story by Amber Leigh Carpenter.

Great Chemistry

The Boys Soccer season begins on a hopeful note

"I'm open! I'm open!" You screamed and your teammate passed you the ball. You dribbled down the field to the opposing goalie. It's you and him, one on one. You took the shot and, "BAM!" The black and white ball drove into the back of the goal and into the net. A triumphant smile spread across your face as your teammates surged from the bench and ran from the opposite end of the field to congratulate you. Welcome to the world of soccer.

"The boys and the field have a great chemistry," said the Varsity Head Coach, Dennis Taylor. In order to challenge for the district title, the boys spent almost everyday out on the field. "We usually do a 10-minute warm-up; then maybe some conditioning - some kind of 'keep-away' game, shooting drills, and then scrimmage for the rest of practice," said sophomore new-comer, Mike Groff. Did I forget to mention that their practice was close to two and a half hours long?

On each team there were between 15 and 20 players. There were 15 Varsity players and 20 JV members. Why were there more players on the JV team? "Well, I expect a number of JV players to move up to the Varsity level," explained Coach Chewning. Eleven players played on the soccer field at one time; 10 field players—usually 4 forwards, 2 mid-fielders, and 4 defense men; and the goalie.

The boys had a very promising season ahead of them. 13 of the 15 Varsity players had returned: 6 returning seniors and 6 returning juniors, and freshman Johnny Cabaniss. "We have a very balanced and experienced team," said Captain Carl Cabaniss. Carl completed his fourth year as a Varsity soccer player this year. "JV is a talented team as well, there's a good balance of power and speed on the JV team," boasted their Head Coach, Brady Liechty.

No matter how many games their team won or lost, these boys just loved to play soccer! "I could play soccer 7 days a week, and still love it!" exclaimed Shane Grizzle. This team didn't lose any points for enthusiasm. Story by Ashley Dameron.

Young and Proud

A young Girls Soccer team prepares for the season

Tryouts for the girls soccer team started February 22. This was the start of a very promising season for the players for the year. Varsity coach John Agnew said, "I haven't been this excited about a season since I first started coaching 12 years ago!" With some of the players from last year, the girls soccer team was in good shape for their upcoming season. Jammie Hillian, Angela Feindt, and Sara Stamps were leaders from the start. "We have lost a lot of awesome seniors from last year," said Angela Feindt, "but the girls we have gained are awesome too, so I'm excited about our season".

The girls soccer season consisted of fourteen games, ten of them district matches. The girls would learn how to play as a team and strive to make the new team come together as a whole. When asked if she was excited about the upcoming season, senior captain Jammie Hillian said, "Of course I'm excited about the season. This year our team is very young and talented. We have a lot of potential and our season looks very promising." This viewpoint put a very good outlook on the season for the girls and was held throughout the season. Story by Bobbi Decatur.

Baseball

The baseball teams awaited their seasons with enthusiasm to play and an expectancy to win.

The baseball teams eagerly awaited the beginning of the season. After weeks of practice and tough conditioning, they were ready to compete. Ben Parsons said, "We have some really great players on the team; hopefully, we'll go to districts." Josh Burgess also believed in the ability of the team. Josh said, "I hope we'll play well enough to go to districts, and I really think we will."

Other members of the team were just really excited to be able to play. Jonathan Cribbs said, "I love this sport; it's my life. I hope we do well this season." Judging by all of the work the teams have done, their seasons would definitely go well.

All the players had high hopes for the season. Truly, with all their hard work and practice, it would be hard to believe that the baseball teams would not play extremely well, or possibly even bring in winning seasons for both of the teams. Gearing up for a Great Season

The smell of sweat and wet leather fills the air... dust blows on your face... where are you? The Stafford High School girls softball field. With hard practice they improved hitting, pitching, and throwing skills. They prepared for a grueling season of competitive games. Varsity player Sara Hatcher said, "We practice really hard each day, and it all really pays off. I can see ourselves getting better and better each day!"

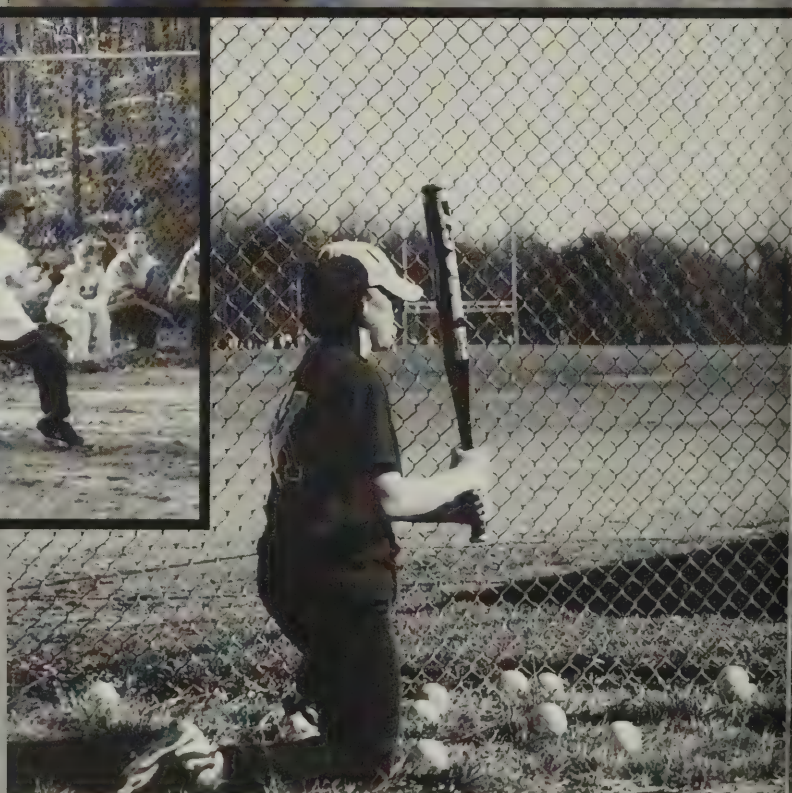

The girls expected a promising season. Junior Amanda Zawora said, "We are really doing great in practices and I think we are gonna have a great season." Teamwork, skills, and practice proved to be the best ingredients in the making of a team. The girls softball team worked together, helping each other with high morale to achieve one common goal: to win! Megan Hanson said, "We all get along and work together. We should do really well."

Swinging into Action

The Boys Tennis team prepare for the season

The tennis team started their year with tiresome tryouts that began in the last week of February. They worked on such skills as different types of swings, sprints and strengthening their endurance. Alok Gulati set the team goals this year by stating, "We want to win districts and go on to regionals; nothing else will do." Oliver Goldman had a different view, "I just want to go out against the softball team and beat them at their own game."

The team is not acknowledged as much as the other spring sports, but they work just as hard. "We practice for perfection and are out there every day busting our tails," said Jeff Cooper. The tennis team has had great success in the past, and is working hard to keep their reputation as good as ever. "We have a strong team this year, and I think that we're going to do really well," said Michael Hodge. Story by Laurie Mathias and Oliver Goldman.

Lacrosse

Most people know little about the sport of lacrosse

A relatively unknown sport, lacrosse is a combination of hockey, field hockey, and soccer. Team members try to get a hard, baseball-sized ball into a net resembling a hockey goal. The only catch is the players must "fling" the ball with lacrosse sticks-nets attached to long poles. "This sport may seem odd, but it's been around forever. Native Americans called it bag-it-away," remarked John Walsky. Through the hard work and determination, the boys of the lacrosse team mastered the ancient sport.

The lacrosse team practiced every afternoon in the spring. "We have a very strong team this year, but the practice still helps," said Sam Newsome. The boys worked diligently to condition themselves for the upcoming season. They planned to surpass last year's record and become champions. "We've worked a long time, and I think we're much better than last year," said Adam Peck. Story by Bri Bevan

Facing the Future

Pizza parties, ice cream socials, and field trips were all benefits that the clubs here at Stafford provided for the students. After school, one could always spot a congregation of students gathering for the French Club, Spanish Club, and the ever so popular Key Club.

Though some students were not a part of any clubs, others appreciated what they offered. Janean Neal said, "Being part of a club is a great way to get to know people and hang out after school." "Yeah, and they [clubs] look really good on college applications," said Oliver Goldman. Courtney Berry commented on the Key Club, "It's a pain sometimes, but I always get the feeling that I'm helping someone."

Overall, the clubs seemed to be beneficial to those involved. There were some, however, who took advantage of the situations. Alden Hingle said, "I just joined the Science club so I could go on the field trips." Adrienne Brown took a different approach, sarcastically saying, "I love Forensics. We meet the coolest people when we go away to compete, especially at student congress."

The great part about the clubs was that they were extracurricular, and it wasn't mandatory attendance. Even so, many students still continued to stay after school, for whatever reasons they may have had. Story by Nicole Brors.

Working hard on Productions

Lights.... Camera.... Action.... During the 1998-99 year, Stafford's Drama Club performed many great plays. "We did a couple different pieces in the year and we tried to have a little variety," said Mr. Clark, the head of the drama department. During the year, the plays that were performed were "U.S.A", written by John Dos Passos and "Taming of the Shrew," written by Shakespeare. The drama club also chose a piece that they use in competitions. This play was called "Adaptations," by Elaine May. "The material is very difficult," said Mr. Williams, who assisted Mr. Clark in helping with the production of these plays. Not only did students act in these plays on stage, but there were also students behind the curtains that helped these plays blossom into their full potential. "Mr. Clark works us very hard back stage," said senior Nathan Compton. Behind the scenes back stage, people would help with props, curtain calls, and lights. Drama preparation for plays was very hard on most of the students this year. They had late practices, double-rehearsals the week before competition, and long hours of acting. "We don't mind Mr. Clark working us hard, 'cause he tends to really push us, but it really shows during our performances and it makes us look good," said Patty Conner. With hard work and long practice hours, students gave it their all, and both Mr. Clark and Mr. Williams agree that they were very proud. "The actresses and actors worked really hard this year and I couldn't expect anything less," said Mr. Clark. Story by Laurie Mathias.

Do Re Me

The halls are alive with the sound of music

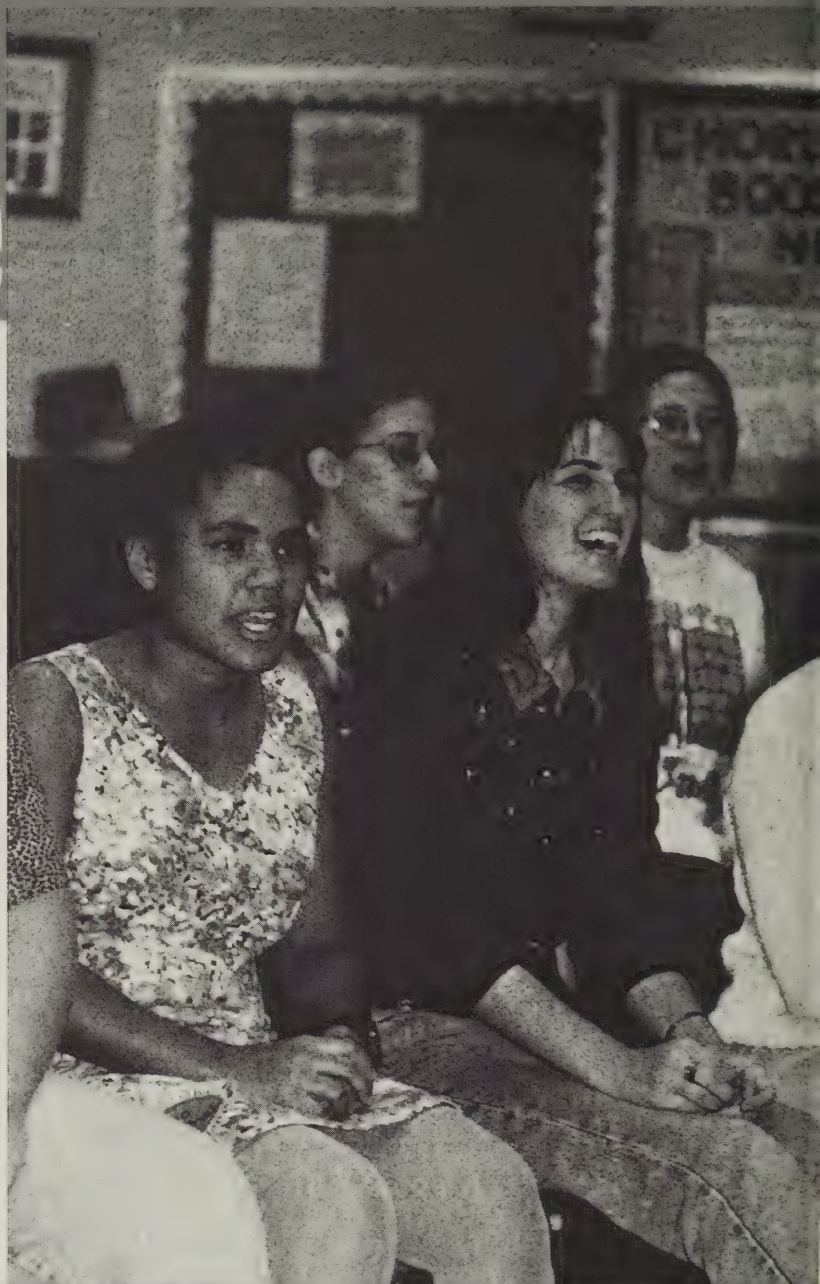

The brightly lit, multi-leveled chorus room gave Stafford High's vocally talented a chance to hone their skills. All year, the members of different chorus clubs, including Choral, Madrigals, Show Choir, and Girl's Ensemble, practiced for their concerts. Some of their concerts included the winter and spring concerts and also a trip to New York. Mrs. Thompson said about teaching chorus, "We're all a big family. We work and play together."

Another activity chorus members participated in, was the Senior Honors Choir. Rachel Maloney, Monica North, Robert Fullmer, Jennifer Swansburg, Holly Lawrence and Jenny Caruba were lucky enough to be chosen. Rachel Maloney commented, "I'm so amazed at the opportunities given to me by participating in chorus."

Even guys exercised their vocal chords in chorus. They helped create beautiful harmonies for the Madrigals and chorus classes. Nathan Havasy commented, "Guys kind of get overlooked in chorus, but some of us really do love to sing."

The students also had high opinions about the class and teacher. They were also amazed at the personal growth that they achieved through singing. "You grow to better yourself and learn more about yourself through singing. And Mrs. Thompson guides us through our journey," remarked Samantha Schelin. Story by Bri Bevan.

Down to Business

For those hoping to enter the world of business after leaving SHS, FBLA and DECA provided the opportunities they were looking for. "DECA has helped me get ready for a career in fashion and business," said Joi Askew. Whether in a business, a fashion merchandising, or a marketing course, students strived toward the future. "I think it's good to be in FBLA. It shows you have experience with business and the world, that's important," said Bonnie Combs. The Future Business Leaders of America and Distributive Education Clubs of America got students prepared to face that big world outside Stafford!

"Since I don't know exactly what I want to do after high school, it's been good to be introduced to different options," commented Brittany Wood, a member of DECA. The clubs gave students a chance to learn about different job opportunities. "You really learn about all the things you could do through DECA. Hopefully I'll get a job that has something to do with fashion," said Vicky Morgan. Business was the key, and members of these clubs were focused and ready to get out into the world! Story by Kristin Nichole Dietz.

Speaking Their Minds

This year's Environmental, Debate, and Forensics Clubs had fun while practicing to speak in front of an audience. Forensics students took plays and compacted them into comedy and drama. Actors either played all the characters themselves, or performed with a partner. Forensics included prose, poetry, oratory speeches, dramatic interpretations, and duos. Lisa Marietta said, "Forensics is a great way to expand your horizons in acting. You can meet many other peers and have a great time being competitive and welcoming new experiences." Lisa, as well as other Forensics students, had superior communication skills. Forensic also took field trips about two Saturdays a month to various high schools in the Washington and Arlington areas. Many students from Stafford placed high at these competitions and proceeded to State and National competitions. Besides the field trips, Amy Parsons said she did a forensics competition because, "I just wanted to make Ms. DeCarlie happy."

Despite what students believe, there was a reason cans were thrown away in separate trash cans during lunch. It was the duty of the Environmental Club to properly dispose these cans. These earth-friendly students recycled over 2,000 pounds of cans! The money collected from recycling were spent on various school projects such as adopt-a-river, building benches around the school, and competition. Jennifer Stockdill and Aimee Dudash participated in the Envirothon competition, which included forestry, wildlife, and aquatics. Cleaning out flower beds and picking up trash around the school pond were just a couple of ways students tried to save their environment. This club respected nature and devotedly tried to preserve Earth's natural beauty.

The Debate Club was a great opportunity for students to argue without getting in trouble for it. "Debate is great for all personalities: loud kids have a chance to get louder, while shy kids learn to be loud. An extra motivational bonus is the fact that if you go to three midterms, you don't have to take the final exam!" said Adrienne Brown. Debate arguments were based on personal views, morals, and known facts. Students participated in five congressional tournaments in which they wrote speeches and rebuttals that defended their opinions. Debates were often outside of school, but students enjoyed meeting new people. Melissa Rose said, "Students from other schools wear their special jackets while Stafford just simply comes as they are and win!"

VICA

The largest club in the school

"It's the loudest and the most talented," bragged Mr. Jett, the club sponsor. The VICA club consisted of the students enrolled in auto mechanics, carpentry, cosmetology, drafting, electricity, CTE (work study), and masonry. To be in the club, all you had to do was, "be in a vocational class, pay the dues, and attend the meetings," said Alden Hingle.

So, what exactly does VICA do? Well, says Kevin Moore, president of VICA, "We have a lot of fund-raisers. Our biggest is the fruit fund-raiser that we have in the fall before Christmas, but we sell candy too." The money raised from those fund-raisers was used for the needs of the vocational wing, competitions, equipment, and the bulletin board contest. Officers were Kevin Moore—president; Becky Quesenberry—vice president; Brian Miller—treasurer; Kristin Dietz—secretary; Stacey Andrews—reporter. Other activities included spring competitions. The members competed in their various areas such as masonry or cosmetology. They could have competed anywhere from districts to states to the national competitions. Also, a favorite of the students was the VICA picnic, which was held at Brooke's Park in May. The VICA club was a very lively and diverse club, whose members thoroughly enjoyed what they did. Story by Ashley Dameron.

TSA

Technology Students Association

TSA is a club in Stafford dedicated to the students interested in technology or careers in technological fields. Any student in a vocational class was welcome to join this club. In TSA, members competed in regional and state competitions. Mrs. Jacobs, the sponsor of the department said, "TSA is a really interesting club. Every year we have students who have participated in the regional and state competitions." Stafford had more regional winners than any high school in the northern region. These competitions were run similarly to science fairs. Some events were even done on site. This club, in participating in these competitions, traveled all over the United States. The Regional competition was held in Manassas, while the National competition was held in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

"TSA is really competitive and fun," said Kenny Aubrey, president of the club. "...we are informed on all new technology events." This program studied the technological news and was updated with all new technology that was created. That is why every two years, these competitions change events to pace with the changing technology. So if you're wondering about anything dealing with technology, come see one of the TSA members and they will surely tell you. Story by Bobbi Decatur.

History & Science

Learning about their favorite subject after school and beyond...

Have you ever had a school subject that you actually enjoyed learning about? One that made you think, "I can't wait for that class!"? Well, the students in the History and Science Clubs took their love of a school subject one step further. Aside from being able to learn more after school about the subject they loved, these students were also able to share fun times and memories with other students who had the same interest.

Alden Hingle, who was in the Science Club, said, "The best part is the field trips. They are fun and informative." Nicole Brors, who was also in the Science Club, fondly recalls one field trip in particular. She said, "I really liked the car museum at Luray Caverns." Alden remembered that trip and said, "Yeah, Luray was cool. Nicole kept touching the stalactites and stalagmites in the caves."

Another member of the Science Club, Kevin Pemberton, took his enjoyment of the after school activity to the extreme. He said, "I enjoy standing in the parking lot of the school until four-thirty talking about Science Club."

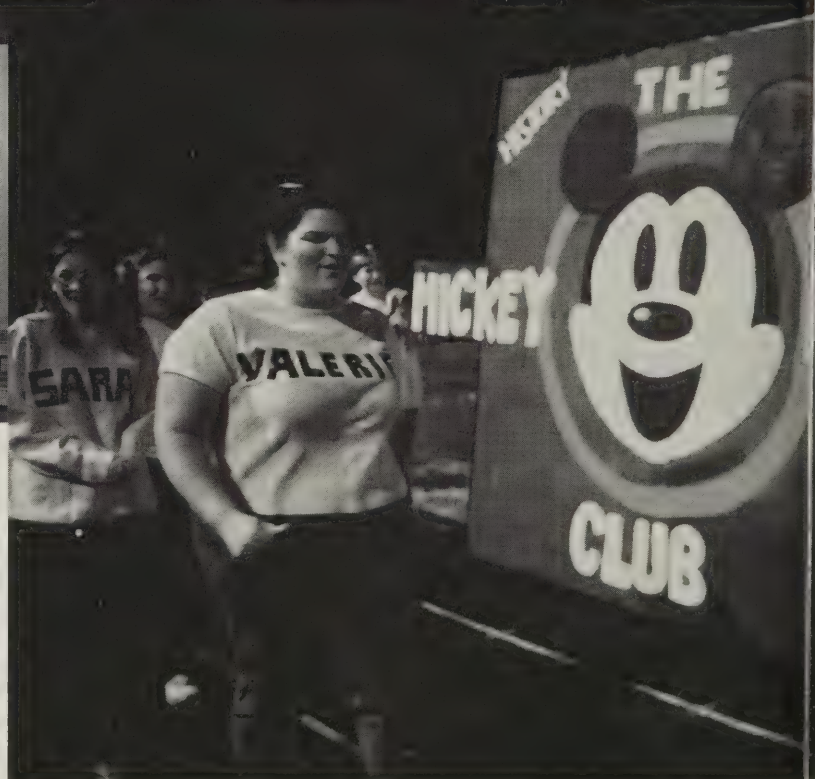

Members of the History Club also thoroughly enjoyed their club activities. Melanie Biscoe said, "History Club is really awesome, and just remember, the past is a blast!" When asked what sorts of fun things they did in History club, Jeni Wiley said, "We watch movies about famous people in history and hold annual debates." Students in this club definitely did get to do what they enjoyed. Sarah Wood also said, "Once again the History Club won first place for Homecoming floats."

Taking Action

Helping out in the Community

This school year proved to be another successful one for two of the most important community service clubs at Stafford High School. The Interact Club and Students Serving Stafford Club proved to be effective in both helping others out and having fun while doing it.

Students Serving Stafford was not only a way to give back to your community, but also rewarded dedicated students for their efforts by allowing them the opportunity to earn a high school credit. Member Meaghan Wilson said, "It was an incredible experience volunteering at the hospital and at Kenmore; you felt as if you really helped your community." And she did. By keeping a log and recording all of her hours, she, along with the other members, collected hundreds of hours, all for a superior cause: the community.

The Interact Club, being sponsored by the Stafford Rotary, was another extremely successful service club. They raised money through fundraisers and donated countless hours of their time for the benefit of others. Such projects included the November "Trick-or-Can" during which canned and boxed goods were collected for the Fredericksburg area Hope House. President Jennifer McPartland said, "I loved caroling at the nursing homes in the area. This, along with other projects makes me feel like I'm really making a difference."

Latin & French

Bonjour! Salve!

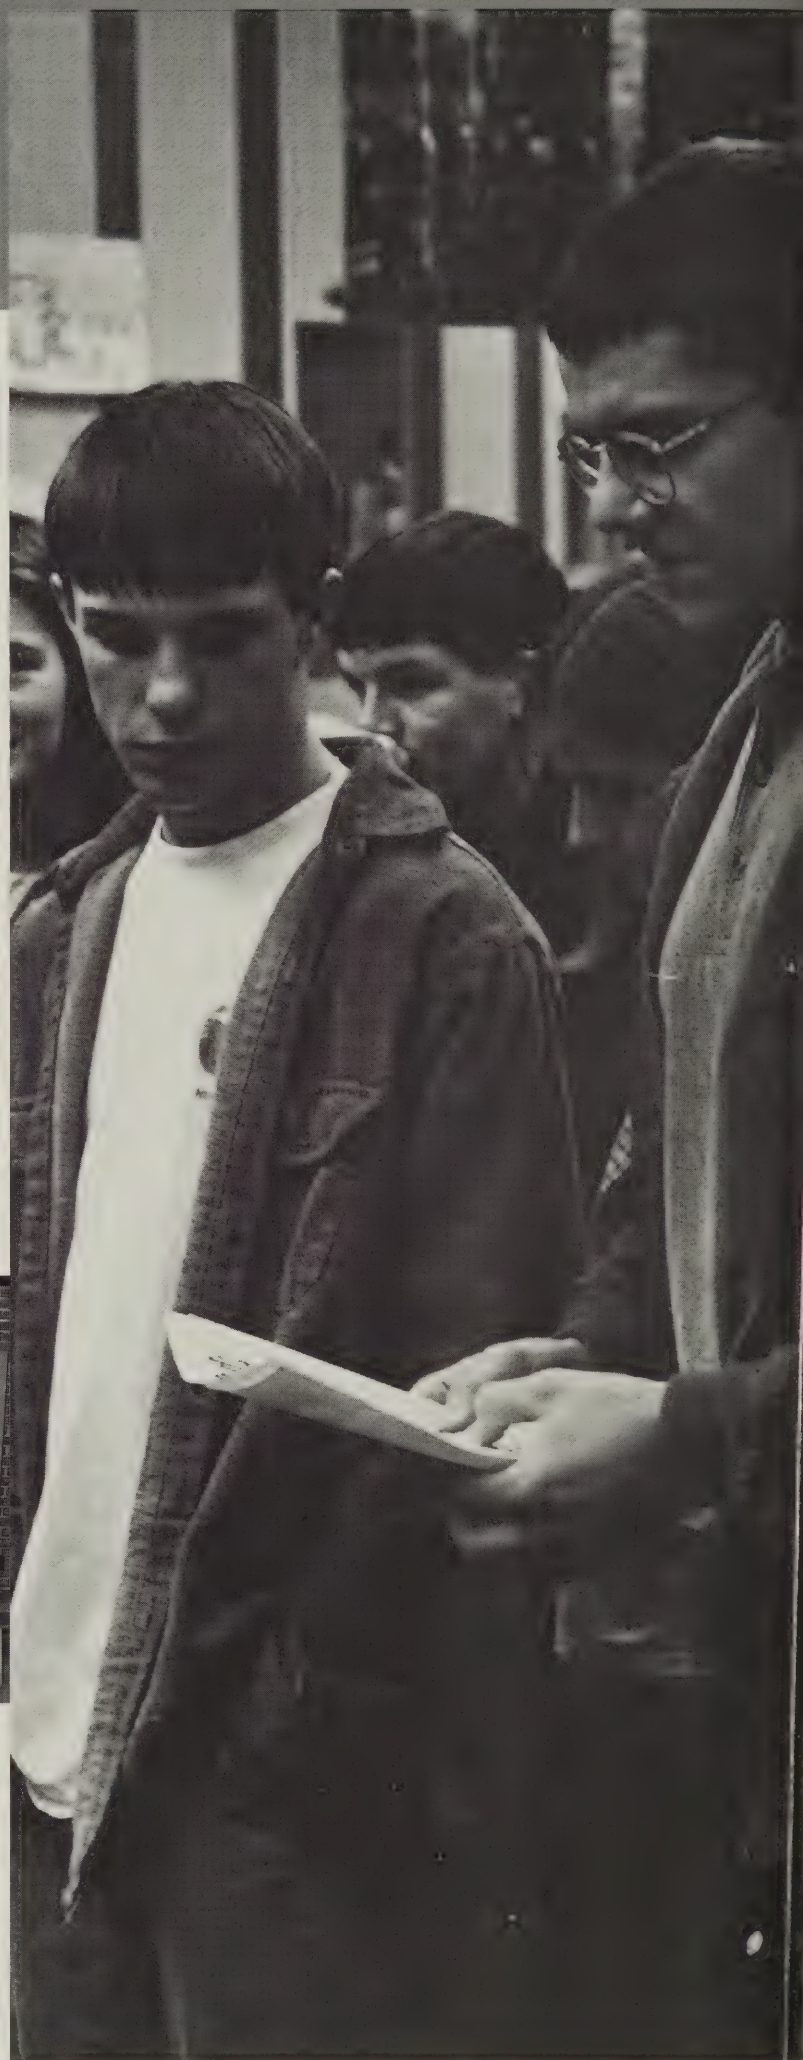

The French and Latin Clubs for 1998-99 consisted of numbers ranging from 50-60 people. Meetings were held for both clubs at least twice a month. Discussions ranged from how they were going to improve their meetings, brainstorming of ideas like fund-raisers that would help them get money for their club, field trips that wanted to be taken, and their overall daily debates. "We always have a lot of heated debates during our meetings," said junior, Jeff Cooper, who is a member of the French club. "It makes our meetings interesting." The French club this year, as every year, did a Valentine's Day fund-raiser in which they sold carnations. People purchased these flowers around the sweetheart holiday to give to their boyfriends and girlfriends or just to their close friends. "During our meetings, fund-raisers are usually a main topic that we discuss," said Lindsay Hession. "I enjoy Latin Club meetings because they supply us food, so it keeps me content," said Michelle Ulrich, a member of the Latin Club. The Latin Club this year didn't meet as much as the French Club, although seemed to still be as involved. Genny Rankin said, "We don't have that many meetings, but when we do, I enjoy them, and wouldn't want to miss them."

The year of 1998-99, was a memorable year for both French and Latin students. And the expansion of languages has brought a growing number of people and cultures to our school. Next year, teachers hope that the number of students taking French or Latin will grow. Story by Laurie Mathias.

German & Spanish

Learning experiences after school

During foreign language class, students in Spanish and German worked on declining nouns and correcting pronunciation. But after the classes ended, students came together again to socialize while discussing the language. "I love Spanish and the club meetings are even better. We get to eat tacos," said Lisa Maloney.

During Spanish Club meetings, students usually chowed down on tacos and soda as the teachers suggested field trip ideas and upcoming activities. Students didn't mind listening to the teachers talk about lessons. "It's cool that we get to eat while the teachers talk. We never get to eat in class," remarked Ann-Courtney Coates.

German meetings were far more under control, considering the fact that the German club had fewer members. Instead of using the cafeteria for meetings, the German club used classrooms. During a typical German meeting, students ate pizza and listened to music. Some students used the time as an opportunity to get help on homework. "Our teachers are really nice. While we eat, we get help on the hard stuff," said Eric Harvey.

Both the Spanish and German Clubs had laid back meetings this year, but they also accomplished many tasks. The meetings helped endear the languages to the students. "I love German!" exclaimed an ecstatic Jay Underwood. Story by Bri Bevan.

Always an Honor

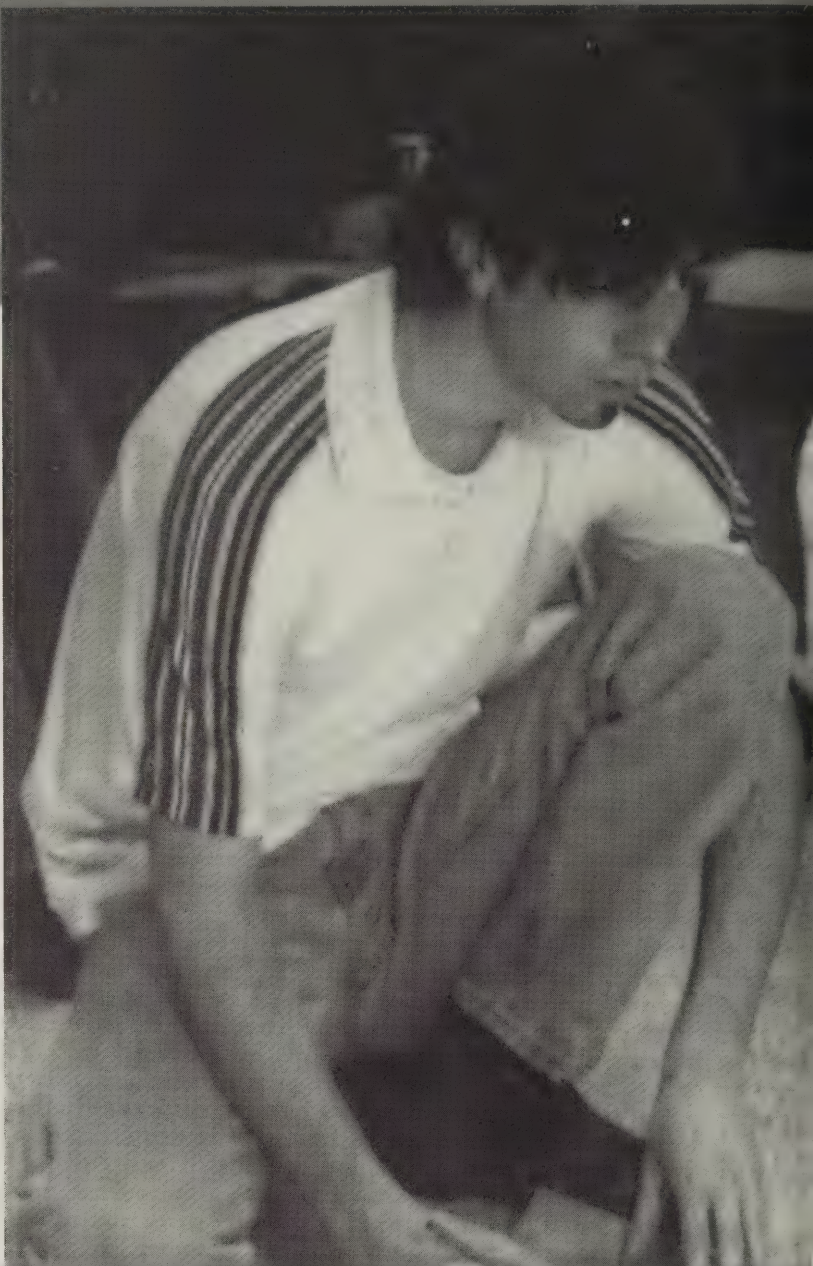

NHS and NAHS excelling at SHS

So what are those letters you hear on the announcements, NHS and NAHS? The National Honor Society and the National Art Honor Society are full of talented, bright individuals at SHS. "NAHS is all about like-minded students who care a lot about art and academics," said Michael Hodge. The NAHS is still fairly new at Stafford, but the students are striving to reach new goals and make each year a little better. "The club is kinda' new but we have a lot of fun and we're serious about art," said Jenn Stockdill.

The National Honor Society took charge of several projects throughout the year. "One of the best things we do at Stafford is the tutoring. It's good because it helps other students," said Edith Bowers. NHS tutored every Wednesday in the library for any student who needed a little extra help. "The club is good if you're going to college because you have to maintain a good average and keep your grades up," added Carl Cabaniss. Leadership

Student Political Leaders make a Stand

Announcements filled the halls of Stafford as the year started off with SCA business. The selling of SCA cards began as students bought their cards in the lobby before school. Under the creativity of Liz Lewis and other officers, money was raised to sponsor the homecoming and prom formal dances by the annual American Legion can food drive. A new success came as the officers arranged a third semiformal dance this year. At the end of February the winter dance was a welcomed extra to Stafford's extracurricular activities. Students of SCA worked hard for their fellow peers' desires. Lisa Mendoza, SCA president, said, "SCA is very time-consuming. Don't run for office if you don't have the time or effort." As a part of required training, officers went to SCA camp over the summer. The officers experienced living in the dorms of Bridgewater college, Virginia for one week. Kristin Dietz said, "SCA camp gives us a chance to meet people all over the state. We share ideas and procedures of our school activities." All the officers brought back a lot of new ideas for new school projects and activities while attending the leadership seminars.

Young Democrats led the school this year while the Republican party failed to unite. Mr. John Agnew ran the club of future politicians. Students such as Eric Harvey attended meetings where various democratic discussions occurred. The homecoming club parade during halftime was a success this year as hours were spent after school working on their float. Both the SCA and Young Democrats share the quality of leadership. Students had a lot of fun representing Stafford High. Story by Amber Leigh Carpenter.

Key Club

The largest service club

What exactly does Key Club do? "With over 200 members, the Key Club primarily serves the school. The club also serves its community," boasted Mrs. Gill. Key Clubbers, "put up and took down the flags, ran the elevator, sponsored the Blood Drives, directed parking for all the football games, put together the Adopt-A-Department teacher appreciation, and organized the Pen Pal projects with the local elementary schools," said Alok Gulati. Members also got involved with Circle K projects, clothing and car drives, and Hope House. The Key Club gave scholarships to their members and had many fund-raisers throughout the year.

The fund-raisers were for conventions. There were many conventions throughout the year as well. "They ranged from Zone to Capital District to International. The Zone is made up of five different schools, the Capital District is a tri-state competition," said Hanan Nassau.

The Key Club also had many sponsors. Mrs. Gill was the main sponsor of the Key Club, as she had been since 1993. The other sponsors were: Mr. Humphrey, who had been a sponsor since 1966; Mr. Roeske, who began sponsoring the club in 1997; Ms. Boose, who started sponsoring in 1998; and Mrs. Wick who sponsored since 1994. Even though there were all these sponsors located at the school, "The Key Club is primarily sponsored by the Fredericksburg branch of Kiwanis International," said Camden Walker. Officers this year were: Camden Walker - President; Amy Bogardus - Vice President; Andrea Varga - Secretary; Alok Gulati - Treasurer; Hanan Nassau - Reporter. Stafford's Key Club also has members in high places. Whitney Eck is the Lieutenant Governor of the Zone, and Crystal Tussing is the Secretary of the Capital District. Story by Ashley Dameron.

Life Skills

Improving skills for future employment

The FHA (Future Homemakers of America) program sponsored by Mrs. Shelton is a state and national organization of girls and boys studying home economics in Junior and Senior High Schools. This organization is involved with consumer aspects of life, or "life skills" said Mrs. Allen, the sponsor of the other related organization, HERO. HERO (Home Economics Related Occupations) is a state and regional affiliated club that gives members occupational job skills for future employment.

The goal of both of these programs is to help individuals improve personal, family, and community living; to contribute employability and to develop leadership ability. If you were to spend a day watching members of this club, you would understand two things. One, that being around a group of people making lots of food can make you really hungry, and two, that these programs are really dedicated to helping students get a better view on the basic living skills that many people never learn as a teenager.

Not only did members learn how to set tables, cook good food, and iron clothes; they had fun while learning. "Being in FHA is really neat because I can learn to set tables and do things that restaurants usually do. That is how we are set up, like a restaurant, cooking food and setting tables."

HOSA (Health Occupations Services of America) is a program set up for the future nurses in our school. This program is developed to teach basic skills for future employment in nursing. These members learn basic skills such as checking heartbeats and taking temperatures and blood pressures.

All these programs run under one goal: to improve the basic skills for future employment in the fields of health, homemaking, and food occupations.

Quarterback John Elway led the Denver Broncos to a 34-19 win against the Atlanta Falcons in Super Bowl XXXIII at Pro Player Stadium in Miami. The Broncos scored 17 points in the game's first half and then 17 more in the fourth quarter alone.

The New York Yankees won a record 24th World Series championship with a sweep of the San Diego Padres. In addition to dominating the Series, the Yankees dominated the 1998 baseball season. They finished the year with an overall record of 125-50—the best ever. Scott Brosius is seen here at the plate in the third game of the World Series.

Terrorist bombs exploded at the American embassies in Kenya and Tanzania in the late summer. The Nairobi bombing took place almost simultaneously with the bombing in Dar es Salaam and killed 247 people. Another 5,500 people were injured. The Dar es Salaam explosion killed 11 people. A few arrests were made, but American government officials say the man responsible was Osama Bin Laden. While Bin Laden, an exiled Saudi millionaire, was not charged in the bombing, U.S. officials suspect him of financing several terrorist strikes around the world. One of those bombings was the 1996 bombing of Khobar Towers, a U.S. military apartment complex in the Saudi Arabian city of Dhahran. Nineteen U.S. military servicemen were killed, and about 500 people were injured in the blast.

Mark McGwire and Sammy Sosa, two power-hitters in the game of baseball, were in a battle of home runs during the summer. Both were looking to beat the home run record of 61 set by New York Yankee Roger Maris in 1961. When the dust settled at the end of the season, McGwire, a 34 year-old right-handed hitter for the St. Louis Cardinals, won the home-run record with 70. Sosa, a 30 year-old right-handed hitter from the Chicago Cubs, hit 66 home runs.

Through all the years, you've been there to cheer.
 Life can only get better - friends forever!
 Congratulations, Darragh Copley and Kristy Noel
 From your families!

Congratulations, Darren!

Best wishes for a healthy,
 happy future.

Love, Mom, Dad, Mike,
 and Mary Catherine

Rap impresario Sean "Puffy" Combs, also known as Puff Daddy, grew up in Mount Vernon, NY. While attending Howard University, he dreamed of becoming a rapper. He moved up the ranks at Uptown records and then out to form his own label, Bad Boy Entertainment, which sold nearly 12 million albums by 1994. In 1997, Puff Daddy made his long-awaited sole debut with "No Way Out," which featured guest appearances by Notorious B.I.G. and Busta Rhymes. The album spawned the best-selling single "Can't Nobody Hold Me Down" and quickly went platinum.

The Backstreet Boys got together about four years ago when Howie, Nick, and AJ met at auditions. They decided to form a group. Then Kevin heard about them and they got together. Kevin asked his cousin to join, and there you have the Backstreet Boys. The group was named after a big market in Orlando, FL, and they won the Viewers Select Award at the MTV Europe awards two years in a row.

President Bill Clinton became embroiled in a White House scandal that led to Congressional hearings on possible impeachment. It all started when Republican attorney Kenneth Starr was appointed as a Special Prosecutor to investigate President and Hillary Clinton's failed investment in an Arkansas real estate venture called Whitewater. A grand jury was called, and that led to several other investigations. They eventually focused in accusations that the President was involved in obstruction of justice and perjury. He was accused of having an 18 month sexual relationship with Monica Lewinsky, then a 21 year-old White House intern. President Clinton eventually did admit to inappropriate behavior, but Congress pushed forward to bring the President to an impeachment trial in the Senate.

Four funky females, collectively known as All Saints, brought a smart, soulful spirit straight to the top of the charts worldwide. A potent combination of street-wise edge and true musicianship, All Saints's members brought an assortment of international influences to the mix: Shaznay Lewis has roots in Jamaica; Melanie Blatt is English and French; and Nicky and Natalie Appleton are Canadian-born but raised in New York and London.

When Shania Twain launched her phenomenal recording career five years ago, she decided to support her albums with music videos rather than touring. Now, three albums and fifteen music videos later, Twain has become one of the top-selling female singers in the United States, with sales approaching 17 million albums worldwide. She says the music videos are crucial. "It's really been the only true performance in my career for the last four years, so I think that speaks volumes for what it's done for my career."

Sarah McLachlan is a talented Canadian whose work is marked by expressiveness, warmth, and the skillful blending of moody rock and folk. Her debut album, "Touch," in 1988, quickly got her a lot of attention. Her latest album, "Surfacing," debuted at No. 2 on the charts and quickly hit the top spot. It went on to sell more than 3 million copies. Nearly a year after its release, it was still going strong winning her two Grammy Awards.

We are so proud of everything you have accomplished so far and we know you will succeed in whatever you do in the future. We love you, Mom & Dad

"It all went by
in a blink."

Congratulations to you and the Class of 1999!

Well, we made it though another year. Great job, everyone! This has been my eighth year of producing yearbooks and every year my staff grows larger and becomes more dedicated to the hard work of producing the yearbook. I pushed them harder than I pushed them ever before and I think the book shows the hard work that was put in by all the staff members. I would like to thank the support and advice of my wife, Kathleen Hughes; my cohorts in the art department, Rachel Sigler and Sharon Null, for putting up with all of the days I was stressing, and for trying to keep me sane and my blood pressure down; Nicole Brors for keeping the writers organized; Amy Parsons for pulling together all the portraits and keeping that smile on her face; Darragh Copley for all her hard work and keeping the photographers organized; Courtney Berry for her help with sports and clubs; Janean Neal and Kate Russell for advertising and organizing the sales and distribution of the book; Mollee Anzivino, Oliver Goldmen, and Shaun Myers for all their extra help and work; Becky Doyal and Jessica Moore for their wonderful photography; Kathy Gardner for her extra editing duties; and Michael Hodge for all his extra help with editing and for the fantastic painting on the cover.

Thanks again to the entire staff,
Mark Hughes / Advisor

Well, after many trials and tribulations, it is finally finished. We rushed deadlines, corrected our errors (despite the mad rush), and it turned out to be one of the best yearbooks ever. But I won't lie, it took a lot of hard work to get it all together.

First of all, I would like to thank all of the photographers for their wonderful pictures that have captured all of the memories this last year. Becky Doyal, Lesley Wall, Kevin Louder, Carin Stoelker, Christina Rubenstein, Matt Catalano, Michael Hodge, Derek Fults, Heather Demko, Desiree Orwat, Jennifer Myers, Jessica Moore, Jennifer Yednock, Augusta Kuchinski, Meaghan Wilson, Erin Hughes, Diana Price, Ashley Ludlow, Emily Dursa, Jessica Player, and Laura Crigler...Thanks to all of you! You have truly made this yearbook beautiful.

Of course we can't forget the writers this year. They worked hard to transform memories into words which we will be forever sketched in our minds. They gave us a look into what the students of Stafford had to say and they sure did a great job on those captions (which seemed to get tedious once in awhile). Thanks to Bri Bevan, Amber Carpenter, Ashley Dameron, Kathy Gardener, Laurie Mathias, Bobbi Decatur, Stephanie Heffernan, and especially Kristen Dietz.

And like most things, there are the people who work hard behind the scenes that no one ever hears about. Katy Russell and Janean Neal worked year round to keep our dough in check; not to mention the many receipts they had to write. While Amy Parsons and Courtney Berry worked especially hard getting everything straightened out on the computer, Darragh Copley did all of the dirty work for Hughes. There were also those who had to keep busy doing mindless jobs for hours, and had to work above and beyond the call of duty. Thanks to Shaun Myers and Mollee Anzivino. Oh yeah, I guess Oliver Goldman did his share too (although sometimes we all wondered what his share really was). But he always provided good entertainment for the class. And thanks especially to Mr. Hughes. Without his artistic ideas and frantic spasms of stress, this would have never gotten done. It was with his help and management that we did such a wonderful job.

I would also like to thank every student who helped make moments turn into memories that we can all cherish forever. I hope that in the years to come, you all will continue to have a wonderful yearbook as well as having wonderful times.

Thanks for all who contributed and good luck to next year's staff,
Nicole Brors/Editor

U.S. Senator John Glenn ended his long career in the Senate with a return to space. Astronaut Glenn, 77, who made a pioneering space flight in 1962, returned to space in November, 1998, aboard the Discovery on a 10 day mission.

Rep. Bob Livingston, a Republican from Louisiana, made a surprise decision to leave Congress just weeks before he was to become Speaker of the House of Representatives. In the wake of the Presidential scandal, he stunned his colleagues when he announced during the debate to impeach President Clinton that he had extramarital affairs that nearly destroyed his 33 year marriage.

In June 1999, you'll be leaving only SMOKE behind.

Congratulations.

In the Spotlight

Drama students find success

Stafford's drama department not only wowed us on the home stage, but their talent won them a district and regional title. The winter one act play is long-awaited both by the actors and actresses, as well as the rest of the student body. Drama classes prepare students throughout the school year, developing their talents and skills for the winter competition.

"Getting ready for competition is a lot of work, as well as fun. I had a leading part, so it can be nerve-wracking at times," said Joe Cozzati. "We want to win but our main focus is to entertain and do our best," commented Katie Carter. The play's success was obvious bringing two additional titles into Stafford's auditorium and qualifying for the state championship as well. "It's one of my favorite parts of the year, it's always fun and we usually do well," said Willie McGhee. A Bold Statement A little humor was important in drama productions. Tim Martin speaks with fellow cast members, Willie McGhee and Joe Cozzati. Actors had to play off each other in order to create a good play. Photo by Ashley Ludlow.

Facing the Change

The biggest part of living is learning and growing, and none of this can be done without change. Some may have hated it; some may have loved it, but we all had to face it.

Whether it was our freshman year, or senior year, life had already taken drastic changes and awaited the coming of new times. Katie Staab said, "Being a senior, I was really excited to finally graduate. But as the year went on, I also thought it was kind of sad because I was going to be leaving everyone I had grown so close to." It was often hard for people to get used to things being different. Many students such as Lisa Mendoza were heard saying, "I'm scared when it comes to change. I don't like the unexpected."

As the year progressed, the feeling of the end of the millennium was nearing, as all of the old memories slowly faded away. But there would always be those moments we would treasure forever such as, "Dancing to N'SYNC with David Kitchins, Brett Lively, Sammy Newsome, and Matt Slaydon for the pep rally. It brought us closer together," said Brad Richmond. Many placed a big emphasis on their companionships. Valerie Thompson said, "I learned a lot about friendships and I've grown close to a lot of people and it'll be hard to move on, but at the same time I'm looking forward to the new experiences."

Though the changes were sometimes sad, a lot was learned and many students were better because of it. "Earlier in high school, I was a dork. But I think throughout my senior year I have grown out of that. I will miss school and everyone, but it's time to move on," said David Behm. As the Semisonic song goes, "Every new beginning comes from some other beginning's end." And as it ended, a new beginning was dawning upon us. Story by Nicole Brors.

Oh Yeah! Striking an unusual pose, Katie Staab enjoys herself at a basketball game. Sometimes students would get goofy, other times, they would be outright wild. But that was part of the fun here at good old SHS. Photo by Darragh Copley.
